WORK BEGUN IN CONGRESS

THE ELECTORAL COUNT RESOLUTION ABANDONED.

MR. BICKNELL FORCED TO WITHDRAW HIS PROPOSITION BY THE REPUBLICANS—ITS RESURRECTION NOT LIKELY TO BE ATTEMPTED.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—In the House to-day, Mr. Bicknell withdrew the Electoral count resolution, after making an ineffectual attempt to force a vote under the operation of the previous question. The Republicans refused to vote, however, leaving the House without a quorum. Realizing that nothing could be done toward disposing of the resolution, Mr. Bicknell was forced to abandon it, before doing which, however, he gave notice that he would again call it up in January, when he hoped a sufficient number of Democratic members would be present to constitute a quorum. It is probable that no further effort will be made to pass the resolution, particularly as the Republicans are determined to take advantage of every parliamentary device to defeat it.

Even with a quorum of their number present the Democrats could not secure a vote on the passage of the resolution, for the reason that the minority can prevent a vote by filibustering. The power of the minority to defeat action on an obnoxious measure was illustrated during the last session of the Forty-third Congress, when the Democratic minority, under the leadership of Mr. Randall, filibustered for more than 46 consecutive hours, thus preventing action on what was known as the Force bill. The Republicans are determined to adopt similar methods, should such a course become necessary, in order to defeat the Electoral count scheme. While the resolution may be maintained before the House in a position where it can be reached at any time under the privileged character given it by the decision of the Speaker, it is probable that no serious effort will be again made to pass it. Speaker Randall is not only a skillful parliamentarian, but an astute political leader, and it is likely that he will utilize the Electoral count resolution to prevent his party on the floor of the House from committing a grave blunder by passing legislation which would be disastrous to them as a party in the future. This he can easily do by maintaining the Electoral resolution in a dormant state before the House and having it called up on every occasion when the passage of bills calculated to work damage to the Democracy is attempted. If the Speaker will preserve the Electoral resolution to hurl against subsidy and other schemes that will undoubtedly be brought forward toward the close of the session, he will make a bad proposition answer a very good purpose.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CHEATING.

HOW ROBERT SMALLS WAS DEFEATED IN THE FIFTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Republican voters of the Fifth Congressional District of South Carolina experienced as severe hardships in their efforts for a fair vote and count as those of any district in the South, and the acts of fraud and violence committed by the red-shirt Democracy in the interest of their candidate, G. D. Tillman, were of the gravest character. Mr. Robert Smalls, in his notice of contest served upon Mr. Tillman, sets forth the following as some of the grounds of his contest: At four voting precincts in Barnwell County, six in Aiken, five in Colleton, and six in Hampton the ballot-boxes were filled with illegal Democratic votes for the purpose of creating an excess of ballots over the number of voters on the poll-list, and then equalizing the same by casting out Republican ballots. At Edgefield Court-house a riotous band, armed with pistols and guns, and dressed in red shirts, took and held possession of the polls the night before and the day of the election, and intimidated Republican voters who would approach for the purpose of casting their ballots. Others, mounted on horses, rode through the town discharging guns and pistols. At Aiken Court-house a loaded cannon was placed near to and covering the polls. At a precinct in Hampton County the Republican tickets were taken away from the holder thereof, so that Republican voters had no tickets wherewith to vote. At every precinct in Edgefield County and at numerous others throughout the Congressional district United States Supervisors of Election were driven from the polls, prevented from keeping poll-lists, and denied admission to the polling places to witness the count. In another instance a Republican Supervisor was ejected from the voting precinct and afterward compelled to sign as correct a return to the Chief Supervisor of which he had no knowledge. Polls were opened at unusual places and at improper hours, of which Republican voters had no knowledge. At several polling-places, usually giving large Republican majorities, the Democratic managers refused to open the polls at all. At other Republican precincts, where the polls were open, they refused to count or make a return of the same.

In four counties the number of votes returned as polled exceed the number of legal voters, as shown by the census of 1880, although thousands of Republican votes were prevented from being cast. These are only a portion of the charges made by Mr. Smalls, showing that the election was conducted in a most fraudulent manner in the interest of the Democratic candidate, who is known throughout the State as a Democratic tiger, violent in his treatment of Republicans, incendiary in his language, and advising all sorts of illegal measures to restrain Republicans from voting.

A CRUMB OF COMFORT FOR PORTER.

THE SENATE PASSES A GREATLY MODIFIED BILL FOR HIS RELIEF.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Senate passed a bill to-day, under which Fitz John Porter can be made an officer of the Army if the President chooses to nominate him, and if the Senate chooses to confirm that nomination. When the debate was resumed, Mr. Dawes offered a substitute for Mr. Randolph's new bill. This substitute authorizes the President, in his discretion, within 18 months of the passage of the bill, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint to the Army Fitz John Porter, who was dismissed by sentence of court-martial Jan. 19, 1863. Provided, however, that such appointment shall give no higher rank than Colonel on the retired list; and provided further, that said Porter shall receive no pay, compensation, or allowance for the time intervening between his dismissal and such appointment. In short, it opens to Porter the road which is open to any other person who wishes to be appointed an officer in the Army, by removing the bar of dismissal, but specifies the rank to which he shall be appointed.

Mr. Randolph was so anxious to do something for Porter without asking too much of his fellow-Democrats that he at once accepted the substitute, maintaining, however, that his bill was a constitutional one. Mr. Dawes informed him that he was not sure that he would vote for the substitute, although he had offered it. Mr. Edmunds offered an amendment, which makes it impossible for the President to nominate Porter after the 18 months have expired, and Mr. Randolph accepted this without hesitation. Then Mr. Edmunds criticised the new bill, showing that the rank of Colonel on the retired list was no lower than that of Colonel on the active list, and that for this reason the President would be authorized to put Porter at the very top of the Colonels of the active list, above men who had long been his seniors. Holding up the Army list, he cried: "Show where he will stand in this long list of talented heroes." He declared that he would not vote for the bill. Mr. Carpenter again showed that the sole object of the bill was to relieve Porter of the sentence of the court-martial.

Senator Logan then spoke for a few minutes with great vigor and frankness. "There is no use in shuffling or dodging," said he. "If you want to get him back, ask the President to pardon him. You won't do that, for you want to get around the court-martial." He declared that not more than 20 votes could have been got at the end of the debate of last session, and expressed some astonishment at the apparent change of sentiment. "He is no more worthy to be in the Army," said he, "than Jeff Davis. Davis was guilty of treason, Porter of perfidy; and if he had been in the Army of the Tennessee he would have ended his existence for it." He denounced the bill as the means of disgracing soldiers whose records were honorable. Moreover, there were 115 other dismissed officers who would be clamoring for the same treatment. He closed by warning the Democrats to let things rest as they had been settled by the war if they really desired quiet in the country.

Mr. Dawes's substitute was then adopted, 36 to 21, by a strict party vote, Judge Davis voting with the Republicans. Senator Burnside then read a long speech on the merits of the case, and at its conclusion the bill was passed by the Senate, 36 to 21.

After the passage of this bill the Democrats discovered, through the kindness of Mr. Edmunds, that they had made a singular blunder. The original bill had a long preamble, which was an appropriate preface for it. Mr. Randolph's recent substitute provided for the removal of the preamble, but Mr. Dawes's, which was passed, did not so provide, so that it was necessary to do something with the preamble. Mr. Thurman looked at it and remarked that it ought to be passed, and it was passed, although Mr. Edmunds showed that it did not agree with the bill. The preamble contains a brief history of the case, and was framed in consonance with a bill which gave Porter full pay for the last 18 years. It is ludicrously inconsistent with the bill which it introduces. The next step is to get the bill through the House; then Mr. Porter can be astir himself about getting his nomination.

OLD MEASURES REVIVED.

MORE WORK BEFORE THE SENATE THAN CAN BE DONE PROPERLY.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The Senate has disposed of the Fitz John Porter bill, but there is a determination to bring up several other familiar subjects which occasioned long debates last Winter, and will be strongly opposed now. Mr. McDonald has given notice that he will try to bring before the Senate to-morrow what is commonly known as the five-per-cent. bill, a measure providing for the payment of 5 per cent. of the value of land located by military warrants to the States in which it has been so located. The consideration of this bill consumed several weeks in the Senate last Winter, and its advocates were overthrown by the very long and able argument of Mr. Edmunds. The bill was indefinitely postponed, but a motion to reconsider was entered. It is this motion which it is now proposed to take up.

It is plain that the Kellogg resolutions will occasion a long debate, and Mr. Edmunds has indicated his purpose to speak at length upon the great principle involved.

Mr. Edmunds introduced to-day a bill in relation to the Geneva award, and it is possible that something may be said on that subject.

Mr. Cameron is anxious that the bill for Ben Holliday's relief shall be considered. Mr. Burnside has given notice that he will try to get up at once his bill for applying a part of the proceeds of the public lands to the establishment of an educational fund.

The calendar contains a long list of public and private bills. The appropriation bills must be passed. An effort will be made to make an apportionment, and the interoceanic canals may become fruitful subjects of discussion. There is a great deal of work ahead, and very little of it will be done. There is much more than can be done properly.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14, 1880.

Treasurer Gilfillan says he is having the checks for the payment of the January interest on bonds prepared at the rate of about 7,000 per day, and that they will be ready for mailing about the 24th inst.

Mr. Edmunds introduced a bill in the House to-day, by request, to revive and continue the Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims, and authorizing the adjudication and payment of certain other claims upon the fund created by section 15 of chapter 459 of the laws of the Forty-third Congress.

Justice Strong, of the Supreme Court of the United States, handed his resignation to the President to-day, to take effect immediately. The resignation will be accepted and a new appointment made at an early day. The condition of Justices Hunt and Clifford remains about the same. The latter is reported rather better to-day than at any time during the past three weeks.

A bill was introduced in the Senate to-day by Mr. McPherson in regard to a monumental column to commemorate the battle of Monmouth. It appropriates $10,000 to aid the Monmouth Battle Monument Association of New-Jersey in erecting on the battle-field of Monmouth a suitable commemorative column. The appropriation is upon condition that the Monument Association contribute a like sum of $10,000.

The resolution reciting the allegation that there is detained at the Washington Post Office certain bags of mail matter which, though containing unfrankable matter, were attempted to be sent through the mails, and calling on the Postmaster-General for information on the subject, was reported to the House to-day by Mr. Money, Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices, with an amendment calling for information as to the abuse of the franking privilege and the loan of the frank to unauthorized persons.

The House Committee on Elections met to-day and agreed to report upon the cases of contested seats. In the matter of Boynton against Loring, of the Fifth Massachusetts District, the committee will submit a unanimous report in favor of Mr. Loring, Republican, the sitting member. In the cases of Wilson against Carpenter, of the Eighth Iowa, and Holmes against Sapp, of the Ninth Iowa, Districts, two reports upon each will be submitted, the majority reports favoring the sitting members, both of whom are Republicans.

The House Committee on Appropriations to-day adopted the Military Academy Appropriation bill as reported from the sub-committee, and instructed the Chairman to report it to the House. It appropriates $328,135 27, based upon estimates aggregating $394,443 53. Among the items are $25,000 for continuing work upon the addition to the Cadet barracks; $11,617 84 for completing the main building and one wing of the new hospital for Cadets, and $2,255 for repairing the roof of the Cadet Barracks. The appropriations for the present fiscal year were $515,324 38.

The House Committee on Military Affairs to-day referred the bill to place Gen. Grant on the retired list of the Army, with the rank and pay of General, to a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. McCook, Sparks, and Bragg. Gen. McCook will call a meeting of the sub-committee this week, with a view of securing early action on his bill. It is not known how Mr. Sparks and Gen. Bragg stand toward the measure. The committee also authorized its Chairman to offer an amendment to the Fortifications Appropriation bill to increase the amount provided for the care of forts from $100,000 to $500,000, the money to be disbursed in repairing forts at the most important and exposed harbors.

NOMINATED FOR CONGRESS.

WEST LEBANON, N. H., Dec. 14.—The Republican Convention of the Third District to-day nominated the Hon. Gustan Ray, of Coos County, to fill the vacancy in the present and in the Forty-seventh Congress, caused by the death of the Hon. Everts W. Farr.

COMMITTING SUICIDE IN CHINA.

HONG KONG, Dec. 14.—F. P. Knight, of Shanghai as American, formerly one of the Commissioners for China at the Centennial, committed suicide on Nov. 8 while laboring under aberration of mind.

THE REFUNDING MEASURES

FERNANDO WOOD'S BILL BEFORE THE HOUSE.

ITS DISCUSSION TO BE INTERRUPTED BY WORK ON THE APPROPRIATION BILLS—ITS PROVISIONS AND THOSE OF TWO SUBSTITUTES—THREE PER CENT. THE PROBABLE RATE OF THE NEW LOAN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Mr. Fernando Wood succeeded to-day in having the Refunding bill taken up by the House by a vote of 156 to 90. The debate was opened by Mr. Warner, of Ohio, in a prepared speech of considerable length, which he read from printed slips, and in which he had more to say in defense of his peculiar theories of finance and currency than in explanation of practical methods of refunding. From present indications the debate will run through several days, although it is not certain that the bill will hold the floor continuously until disposed of, for the reason that general appropriation bills are given precedence, and may be used to brush the Refunding bill temporarily aside. If the discussion could be confined to two or three days, with an understanding that a vote should then be taken on the bill and pending amendments, it is likely the Committee on Appropriations would consent not to antagonize refunding with their measures; but as there are now 15 members on the list to speak, it is feared that such an arrangement cannot be made. If a majority of these ambitious orators would agree to print their speeches in the Congressional Record without consuming the time of the House in giving them oral utterance the public interests would be quite as well served.

While an intelligent opinion cannot be given at this time as to the character of the measure which the House will pass, there are decided indications that, regardless of the element of time in the proposed bonds, the rate of interest will not be above 3 per cent. per annum. The Committee of Ways and Means unanimously favor this rate, and the belief among members seems to be very general that the credit of the Government is equal to placing a loan at par for any amount at 3 per cent. This belief is strengthened by the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury in his annual report said that, with the present favorable state of the money market, a sufficient amount of such Treasury notes as he recommended to be issued, bearing an annual interest of 3 per cent., could be sold to meet a considerable portion of the maturing bonds.

The pending bill originally fixed the rate or interest at 3½ per cent. per annum, but this was amended at the present session by the Committee of Ways and Means, and fixed at 3 per cent. As it now stands before the House, the first section of the bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000, which shall bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent., per annum, redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after 20 years, and payable 40 years from the date of issue. It also authorizes the issue of notes to the amount of $300,000,000, bearing interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after two years, and payable in 10 years from the date of issue; "but not more than $40,000,000 of said notes shall be redeemed in any one fiscal year, and the particular notes to be redeemed from time to time shall be determined by lot, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe."

The second and third sections authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange, at not less than par, the 3 per cent. bonds for any of the outstanding bonds of the United States bearing a higher rate of interest than 4½ per cent., and confers upon the Secretary full power to issue bonds and notes to the amount necessary to carry out the provisions of the bill.

The fourth section amends the act of Feb. 26, 1879, authorizing the issue of certificates of deposit, so as to continue and limit the amount of certificates to be issued to $50,000,000 to be outstanding at any one time, and fixes the rate of interest to be allowed thereon at 3 per cent. per annum for one year, after which interest shall cease, "and the said certificates shall be convertible at the option of the holders, when presented in sums of $50 or multiples thereof, into the coupon or registered bonds authorized by this act; and whenever any of the said certificates shall be converted into bonds the same shall be canceled and destroyed; but the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, issue new certificates in place of those so converted, up to the limit of $50,000,000, until the aggregate amount of the bonds authorized by this act, and of the said certificates combined, then outstanding, shall equal the amount of bonds hereby authorized" —$700,000,000.

The fifth section provides that the 3 per cent. bonds shall be the only bonds receivable as security for national bank circulation.

The substitute offered to-day by Judge Kelley is substantially the plan recommended by Secretary Sherman in his annual report, except that the rate of interest is fixed at 3 per cent. instead of being at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent., at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, as proposed by Mr. Sherman.

Another substitute was offered to-day by Mr. Gillette, of Iowa, which provides that the surplus revenue shall be devoted to paying off the bonded debt; that the Secretary of the Treasury shall coin silver dollars to the full capacity of the mints; that $250,000,000 in Treasury notes shall be issued and exchanged for a like amount of bonds, unless coin is demanded, in which case at least one-half of the coin paid shall be in silver coin; that after May 1, 1881, no more national bank notes shall be issued; that as a further means for raising the necessary funds to pay all outstanding bonds an income tax of 3 per cent. shall be imposed upon all incomes exceeding $1,500 per annum, and upon all incomes in excess of $5,000 per annum an additional tax of 3 per cent. In short, Mr. Gillette's bill is the embodiment of the Greenback national platform. Both substitutes are considered as pending, and it is probable that other substitutes and amendments will be offered before a vote is reached.

The following is the vote in detail on Mr. Wood's motion to take up his bill. [Republicans in roman, Democrats in italics, Greenbackers in SMALL CAPITALS.]

A MARVELOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

SING SING, N. Y., Dec. 14.—The Peekskill special, which left the Grand Central Depot at 5:40 o'clock this evening, when just south of the King's Bridge Station, on the New-York Central and Hudson River Railroad, struck a man who was walking on the track carrying a large bag. The engine threw him up in the air higher than the smokestack, and landed him some distance to one side of the road. The train was stopped, and, upon going back, the man was found to have picked himself up, repossessed himself of his bag, and, only complaining of an injury to his left shoulder, walked, with the assistance of two policemen, to the station. This is considered by the trainmen as a miraculous escape from instant death.

REVIVING THE KELLOGG CASE.

SENATOR SAULSBURY GIVES NOTICE THAT HE WILL CALL UP THE RESOLUTION OUSTING MR. KELLOGG.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Mr. Saulsbury gave notice in the Senate to-day that he would move on Thursday again to take up the resolutions of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in relation to Senator Kellogg's seat, Mr. Hoar, a member of the committee, directed Mr. Saulsbury's attention to the fact that Mr. Spofford had died; that Mr. Manning had been appointed in his place, and that the committee had not held a meeting to consider Mr. Manning's credentials. Mr. Saulsbury was not in a mood to take advice, and replied that Manning's credentials would be considered at the proper time. There were two resolutions on the calendar, one declaring Kellogg's seat vacant and the other giving the seat to Spofford. The second had become inoperative, but the first could be disposed of. Mr. Hoar suggested that Mr. Saulsbury was not obeying the order of the Senate, and was not dealing properly with the question by endeavoring to act upon a part of it before calling the committee together to come to a decision upon the whole as it now stood; but Mr. Saulsbury maintained his original position. Mr. Edmunds asked for a postponement until after the holidays, and this moved Mr. Blaine to ask the Democrats if the Senate were really to have any holidays this year. Mr. Beck having expressed some views on this subject in a newspaper, replied that he was in favor of continuing the daily sessions, except upon Christmas and New Year's. The Senate then turned to other business.

GEN. GRANT IN WASHINGTON.

HIS SPEECH AT THE RECEPTION GIVEN BY THE BOYS IN BLUE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—A reception under the auspices of the Boys in Blue Association was given to Gen. Grant at Masonic Temple, in this city, to-night. A large number of prominent public men, Army officers, and citizens, with their wives and families, were present and paid their respects to the ex-President. Gen. Grant arrived at the Temple soon after 8 P.M., and remained until nearly 10 o'clock. Soon after his arrival he was formally introduced to the audience by Judge Jacob Noah, private secretary to Secretary Ramsey, when he responded to the cordial reception with the following remarks:

LADIES AND SOLDIERS AND GENTLEMEN: It is a matter of great gratification to me to be once more here at the capital of the Nation, where I have spent more days, more years, than at any other one place since I was 17 years of age. It is also a special pleasure to meet so many of my old comrades who were my comrades in the dark days of the past, and who, with our absent comrades, assisted to preserve to ourselves and to your descendants our glorious country. Since I left this city it has been my good fortune to have traveled a great deal and to meet a great many of our countrymen. I have met our comrades in every country that I have visited—in Europe, in Asia, and in Africa. I have met the boys who wore the blue—and, as a rule, I found them maintaining the honor and dignity of our native country. I met none of them anywhere who were ashamed of their native country, or who elevated any country above their own to my sorrow, however, I am compelled to say I did meet some Americans abroad who magnified the virtues of the foreign countries in which they were, and belittled their own homes and institutions. I found, too, upon speaking to them, that they were people who knew but very little of any country, and who, if they were compelled to earn the money they were traveling upon and spending with such free hands would have been glad to have some back here to earn it. From my experience of them they would have found it very up-hill work to have secured even a bare living in any of the countries they lauded above their own.

I come back to you convinced that what we fought so hard for, what so many of our comrades died for, was so worthy of the sacrifice that even those who fought against us begin to appreciate that they are the gainers by their defeat, as much even as we by our success. We are glad to welcome back all these to our common country, and we are willing to concede to them all the privileges that we claim for ourselves, asking only in return that they shall regard us as their equals on their own soil, and that, too, without our being required to make an abject apology for the part we took. I expect though that we are so very obstinate in our views on this question that we still maintain we did right before, and if the same occasion should call us out, we would do it again. Gentlemen, when I got up before you I did not intend to say anything more than that I was very glad to see you—to see so many of you her to-night. I always rejoice and am proud of the kind receptions accorded me by our old comrades in the field. I think you one and all.

THE BURNING STELLARTON MINE.

THE CAGE PIT NOW ON FIRE—THREE EXPLOSIONS, BUT WITHOUT LOSS OF LIFE.

HALIFAX, Nova Scotia, Dec. 14.—Ever since the explosion in the Foord pit it has been a matter of doubt whether or not the fire had extended to the workings of the cage pit. Deputy Manager Douglass went down the hoisting shaft of the cage pit this morning to see how the ventilation had been going on. On reaching the bottom of the shaft he observed indications of fire, and on proceeding a little further he saw a flame, after which he immediately returned to the surface. Soon afterward, about 7:30 A. M., a slight explosion occurred, followed at intervals of 15 minutes by two other blasts. There was very little noise, but large volumes of smoke poured forth from several different openings at the same time. No damage was done to any of the surface works, nor was any one injured by the explosions this morning, but it has cast a gloom over the place, as some hopes were previously entertained that the cage pit might be opened, and a large number of men given employment, but by the occurrence of this morning that last hope is gone and the outlook is very serious. Gangs of men are now engaged in filling up all the openings so as to exclude the air from the mine and thus try to smother the fire.

STELLARTON, Nova Scotia, Dec. 14.—The situation remains unchanged. At the cage pit a dense volume of smoke still continues to pour from the mine, notwithstanding a large force of men has been employed all day trying to block up the mouth and other openings so as to starve the fire out for want of air.

ALBANY "JOURNAL" LITIGATION.

ALBANY, Dec. 14.—At the adjourned term of the Circuit Court to-day, in the case of Charles E. Smith against Philip Ten Eyck and others, the motion for the appointment of a Receiver of the property of the Evening Journal was argued by Henry Smith for the plaintiff and Hamilton Harris for the defendants. Henry Smith, counsel for Charles E. Smith, stated that his client would accept $15,000 for his one-eighth interest, or would give seven times that amount to the other partners, and assume the debts and liabilities of the concern. Mr. Harris said the parties he represented did not want to sell at any price. Justice Osborn ordered a reference to Charles T. F. Spoor, to ascertain and report to this court, on or before Dec. 24, the state of the accounts of the parties in this action with the firm of which they were members, so as to show the amount each has drawn from the firm and the account of each with said firm.

OHIO GRANGERS IN SESSION.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 14.—The Ohio State Grange assembled here to-day, Master Brigham in the chair. All counties, except four, are represented, and there is an unusually large attendance of visiting Grangers. Master Brigham presented his annual report, showing the State organization to be in a very prosperous condition, financially and otherwise. The address gave special attention to the transportation question, the point of which was that, while he did not deem it wise for Grangers to be officers in their organizations of corporations, still, he urged upon them the necessity of united action in their endeavors to secure more uniform and permanent rates of freights upon railroads.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 14.—The Chamber of Commerce to-day rejected an amendment to the constitution to make it conform to the resolution adopted last year to withdraw from the National Board of Trade, and directed the Secretary to send an application to the National Association for reinstatement.

THE IRISH DISTURBANCES

NEW CASES OF LAWLESSNESS CONSTANTLY OCCURRING.

A BLOODY AFFRAY NEAR CLARE-MORRIS—ANOTHER JUDGE THREATENED—TROUBLE IN OBTAINING JURORS—CRITICISMS ON THE GOVERNMENT'S DILATORY COURSE.

DUBLIN, Dec. 14.—Of the panel of 48 from which a jury is to be selected for the traversers, 30 are tradesmen, 3 agents, 4 gentlemen, 1 a secretary of a railway company, 1 a hotel-keeper, and 1 a Lieutenant-Colonel.

The Gazette declares that the Barony of Inneshowen, in the County Donegal, is in a disturbed state, requiring additional Police.

At the weekly meeting of the Land League to-day Michael Davitt stated that the Executive of the league proposed to issue suggestions to organizations of the league throughout the country embodying their opinion upon the outrages, a manifesto was then adopted containing elaborate suggestions in regard to future proceedings of the branches of the League, and urging that there must be no compromise with landlordism.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—At the Waterford Assizes, although the jury panel has been three times called, and on the last two occasions under penalties of £10 and £50 respectively, for non-attendance, not a sufficient number have answered the summons for a jury to be struck.

In the Boyd murder case the Solicitor-General has applied for a postponement of the trial, basing the application on affidavits of the Police that the district is terrorized.

At Irishtown, near Claremorris, last night a body of men attempted to enter a farm from which a tenant had been evicted. They attacked the Constabulary, who immediately fired upon them, wounding four. Two men were arrested.

The Times, in a leading editorial article this morning, says: "The address in reply to the speech from the throne on the opening of Parliament, will assure the Queen of the readiness of the House of Commons to act upon suggestions made from the throne, and if any opposition arises it will come from a small section of the Irish members. The representatives from England and Scotland are practically unanimous, so impressed are they by the revelations of the reign of crime in Ireland; and a majority of the Irish members will, we believe, consent to proposals they recognize as inevitable, however much they deplore their necessity. There may be a short but strenuous struggle before a bill is passed, and the spirit of obstruction may have to be overcome, but the result cannot be doubtful. A vast majority of the members who will vote for the suspension of the Habeas Corpus act, will do so with undisguised reluctance, and yet not the less with the conviction that the proposal has not been made a moment too soon. The Government are indeed to believe that, in the abnormal condition of the overcrowded shores of the west of Ireland, the organization of an emigration scheme may be expedient and possible, as the co-operation of Canada is already assured."

Baron Dowse, presiding at the Connaught Assizes at Galway, has received a letter threatening him with death should he convict any member of the Land League.

It is announced that the Queen will hold a Council to-morrow. Possibly it will be only for routine business.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in a leading article, says: "The reports of interviews between Mr. Gladstone and the head of the detective Police are entirely untrue. What is true is that the crisis which was rightly supposed to exist 24 hours ago, has been staved off by an arrangement which shows that it was brought on unnecessarily, for nobody will believe that a mere threat of the suspension of the Habeas Corpus act in January will affect the movement of to-day."

All the Ministers were again present at the Cabinet Council to-day.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The Times, in its leading editorial, attacks the Government for not taking energetic measures in Ireland, and says in the presence of such growing disorganization, silence and inaction are hard to be excused—they cannot be justified. The Times hears that Lord Kenmare is about to quit Ireland. In consequence of his employing a skilled carpenter at a house which he had just built at Killarney to the exclusion of local workmen, he has received notice that unless the carpenter is not immediately dismissed the house will be burned down. Last year, in consequence of the distress, Lord Kenmare borrowed £30,000 in order to give employment to his people.

OTTOMAN MATTERS OF STATE.

MINISTER LONGSTREET RECEIVED BY THE SULTAN—THE GREEK AND ALBANIAN TROUBLES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 14.—Turkish military preparations are increasing.

M. Tissot, the French Ambassador, has received a dispatch from his Government announcing that France and Germany are in accord on the Greek question.

Gen. Longstreet, in presenting his credentials to-day as United States Minister to Turkey, conveyed to the Sultan the friendly greetings of President Hayes, who desired to cement the present amicable relations between the United States and Turkey, and to extend and improve the commercial intercourse between the two countries. The Sultan, in reply, expressed readiness to do all in his power to draw closer the existing friendly relations, and intimated satisfaction at the appointment of Gen. Longstreet. The Sultan subsequently gave an audience to Mr. Heap, the United States Consul-General at Constantinople, and invited him, Gen. Longstreet, and the officers of the United States man-of-war Nipsic, to dinner.

TEHERAN, Dec. 14.—It is reported here that the Sheik Abdullah has issued orders to the Kurds to suspend hostilities until next Spring.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—A dispatch from Vienna says the Albanian League has now entirely disappeared.

HENRI ROCHEFORT IN TROUBLE.

LETTERS WHICH HE WROTE WHEN UNDER ARREST USED AS A WEAPON AGAINST HIM.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—The great subject of interest here is a newspaper warfare between Henri Rochefort and M. Gambetta. In consequence of M. Rochefort's persistent abuse of M. Gambetta, the latter has indirectly caused certain letters to be published, in which M. Rochefort, when under arrest for participation in the Commune, besought, in humble terms, the mediation of M. Gambetta and Gen. Trochu in his favor. M. Rochefort, in these letters, disavowed his connection with the Communists. M. Rochefort has challenged M. Reinach for publishing these letters. M. Reinach has replied that he simply published the letters signed by M. Rochefort and that he owes the latter no reparation.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A correspondent at Paris says Louise Michel, the Communist, has proclaimed Henri Rochefort a traitor, who ought to be expelled from the circle of Communism.

CURRENT FOREIGN TOPICS.

PARIS, Dec. 14.—M. de Lesseps states that 1,800,000 shares of the Panama Canal have been subscribed by 200,000 persons. The greatest subscriber is France, and next to France is Spain.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—The Progressists and Democrats obtained a tremendous victory in the late election at Altenburg. Herr Koempfer has been elected member of the Reichstag by a majority of 8,500, in a district which never before returned a Progressist. This is partly owing to the new corn laws.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—Joseph Tapson, formerly Secretary of the Metropolitan Railway Company's Provident Savings Bank of London, who was arrested in Philadelphia by English detectives on Sept. 11, charged with being a defaulter to the sum of £10,000, and who was brought back to England on a warrant of extradition, was sentenced in the Central Criminal Court to-day to five years' penal servitude.

GENEVA, Dec. 14.—The proposal of the Federal Council to coin 250,000 gold twenty-franc pieces has been rejected by the National Assembly, on the ground that in the present state of exchanges the operation would bring no profit to the country, and would be regarded abroad as a step toward a gold standard, a consummation which the Assembly earnestly deprecated.

ROME, Dec. 14.—The Pope, at a secret consistory, yesterday, delivered his allocution. Speaking with some severity of the sufferings the Church is undergoing in different countries, he made a very distinct allusion to the condition of affairs in France, but his words were prudently chosen, so as not to give any Government offence. At a consistory to-day the Pope, in delivering an allocution, deplored the position of the Church, which was compelled incessantly to fight for liberty against the audacity with which religion and Catholic institutions are attacked, and against the iniquitous laws imposed upon the faithful to the injury of the faith and the salvation of souls.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 14.—The official project for the readjustment of taxation contains the following propositions, based upon reports from Russia and abroad: "It is proposed that incomes derived from capital, trade, commerce, labor, land, and property be taxed according to an equal percentage; that all foreigners living in Russia be taxed equally with Russians; that all Government securities be taxed, but that foreigners always living abroad shall not pay tax upon incomes derivable from those securities upon which Russia bound herself, at the time of their issue, to pay interest abroad, and that such foreign bondholders always residing abroad, and wishing to avail themselves of this immunity, shall certify at their bankers that they are not Russian subjects."

LONDON, Dec. 15.—A dispatch from Bucharest says: "As Premier Bratiano was entering his carriage at the Chamber of Deputies to-day, an employe of the Finance Department, whose antecedents are not creditable, rushed upon him with a poniard, and inflicted a slight wound in his face. Deputies came to the assistance of M. Bratiano, and handed over the assassin to the Police."

INDIANA SENATORIAL HONORS.

GEN. STREIGHT'S OPPOSITION TO GEN. HARRISON—THE CANDIDATES AND THEIR ARGUMENTS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 14.—A caucus of Gen. Streight's friends and a few members of the Assembly was held at the Grand Hotel to-night, on the call of Gen A. D. Streight, the purpose being to organize an opposition to the candidacy of Gen. Harrison for the Senate. Gen. Streight denounced Gen. Harrison as the representative of the Indianapolis ring, to whose work the speaker attributed his defeat as candidate for Governor. There were not a score present, and at least half of these left the room when the purpose of the caucus was bluntly made known. It is Streight's scheme to call out as many candidates for Senator as possible to prevent a concentration on Harrison in the early ballots, and then to bring Porter out as a compromise candidate when the contest becomes embittered. There is a pressure to induce Judge Gorham to re-enter the field, and it is indicated that he is not averse to doing so if the outlook be made to appear possible. The Hon. John M. Butler, of this city, is a candidate, and is bringing the argument against Harrison that he is very unpopular with the Greenbackers, and it will not do to antagonize the Greenbackers, whose votes will be needed in 1882 and in 1884. It is also urged that Porter is favorably regarded by the Greenbackers, but the Republicans have information that the Greenbackers are not inimical to Harrison, who has always been open and fair in his opposition to their views. Gov. Porter has repeatedly declined to allow his name to be used, and says he does not believe any contingency will arise when his name will be needed to harmonize the party; certainly he will not permit himself to be used as a tool by Streight to the disadvantage of his old partner and friend, Gen. Harrison. This is the first appearance of anything like organized opposition to Harrison.

The Republican Senators will h

ODD DOINGS FOR A WOMAN

MRS. BERGMANN CONTINUING HER STRANGE ACTIONS.

SEARCHING THE TOWN FOR THE SPANIARD —FINDING, BUT DISAPPOINTED — HE TELLS HER HE DOES NOT CARE FOR HER—SHE IS FOUND WITH MEN IN A BOWERY RESORT.

Mrs. Elise Bergmann, the child-wife of Carl Bergmann, of Philadelphia, will obtain further unfortunate notoriety. On the 25th ult., when her friends left her with a nurse at the Park-Avenue Hotel to be treated by Drs. Hammond and Sims, it was believed that after an operation had been performed she would recover her health, and that the eccentricities which had marked her conduct from the departure of herself and her husband from Barcelona would no longer vex her relatives. After undergoing treatment for a few days, Mrs. Bergmann declared emphatically that she would not submit to an operation, and began to seek for the young Spaniard whose acquaintance she had made on the steamer. For three weeks her nurse's office was no sinecure. In the day-time the nurse, who had been instructed not to oppose her charge, had to follow Mrs. Bergmann in the streets. Every person who looked like the young Spaniard was followed until Mrs. Bergmann discovered that she was mistaken. The person whom she sought were on the steamer an overcoat, of a peculiar gray color. If, in going through the streets, Mrs. Bergmann saw a man wearing an overcoat of this color she exclaimed "There's the Spaniard!" and could hardly be restrained from running after him and plucking him by the sleeve. In the evening Mrs. Bergmann led her nurse to concert halls and entertainments, and was several times handled by men who supposed she was an adventuress. Mrs. Bergmann constantly visited Police Headquarters to see Mrs. Webb, the matron, who had won her affections by her kindness to her, and President French, who had consented, at the request of Mr. Bergmann and Mrs. James Swain, her mother, to look after her. Mrs. Swain corresponded almost daily with Mr. French, and was much pained when she learned that her daughter's infatuation for the young Spaniard had not ceased. At last Mrs. Bergmann revolted, and would not submit to the treatment of her physician. She hired a shabby room in Fourth-avenue and continued her search for the Spaniard. She found out his guardian, a well-known Spanish merchant, and visited him, begging that she might be allowed to see his ward. When reasoned with, she declared that she would not cease her endeavors to find him. The visits to the guardian became so annoying that she was told that if she did not discontinue them a complaint would be made to the Police. Then she stood in the street, and in bitter cold weather, on several occasions, near the gentleman's office, hoping, evidently, that the young Spaniard would appear.

At last it was planned that she should find herself in the presence of the object of her infatuation. The guardian of the lad consented to the scheme, and the latter, who is studying English at a school within the limits of New-York, and who was in bitter ignorance of Mrs. Bergmann's adventures, was questioned in regard to their acquaintance on board the France. He said that Mrs. Bergmann, who spoke a little Spanish, "threw herself at him. He did not care for her, but she persisted in continuing the acquaintance. Their flirtation was severe, however, desperate. Mr. Bergmann's attention was drawn to his wife's conduct, and called the young Spaniard to account and made some desperate threats. Mrs. Bergmann, fearing her husband, but she availed herself of every opportunity to chat with him, and at night would leave her cabin and steal on deck if she thought he was there. He promised his guardian that if he were confronted with Mrs. Bergmann he would tell her that he did not care for her, and that she was a nuisance which he wished to be rid of. Mrs. Bergmann, being questioned, told a different story. The Spaniard, who is 18 years old, had vowed his love for her, she said, and had promised that if she would get clear of her husband he would marry her when he was of age. Mrs. Bergmann has been asked if her infatuation would continue if she should meet the Spaniard and was told by him that he was utterly indifferent to her. She replied that she did not believe it possible, as he had shown such an interest in her church; that if he did she would be governed by circumstances.

It was known that Mrs. Bergmann would visit Police Head-quarters on Monday afternoon, and it was arranged that the guardian should bring his ward to 1 P. M. Mrs. Bergmann came a little before that hour called on Mr. French and chatted and laughed for a few minutes, and then went to the matron's department. At the appointed hour the Spaniard called with his guardian. The young man is not an Adonis, and is rather awkward. His guardian, in presenting him said that awkward as he appeared, he had passed two hours that day in drilling him for the interview. A clerk in the office of the young man's guardian had come with them to the interview. Mr. French sent the party to the Lost Children's Department, and Mrs. Bergmann met the Spaniard in the presence of Janitor Webb, President French, and the guardian. She was unprepared for the meeting, but had only a few minutes before said that she would be willing to meet him if he should seek the Spaniard. She was delighted to see him, but he greeted her coldly, and, at his request, the interpreter bluntly translated his first question: "What the deuce do you want with me anyway, and why do you annoy me so?" Mrs. Bergmann was taken aback at this demand and the lad proceeded to tell her that he did not care anything for her; had never cared for her, and could never have any affection for her. He demanded that she should let him alone, and attempts to see him, and threatened to leave the country if she ever again annoyed him or his guardian. Having thus fulfilled their promise, the Spaniard and his guardian left. Mrs. Bergmann was astounded at the conduct of the Spaniard, and admitted that her infatuation had received a severe shock, but she was suspicious, and confessed that the Spaniard was not so handsome as the image of him in her mind. But she was not sure that he was not influenced by his family, or that he was not coerced by some other person to act as he did. She would not admit that she was cured of her passion, but asked that she might be allowed to reflect for a week.

The silly stories published in the evening papers of Monday reached Philadelphia a week before Mrs. Bergmann had sprained her ankle, but she decided that she ought to see her daughter and endeavor to persuade her not to continue in her course. Accompanied by a faithful nurse, who was with her when Mrs. Bergmann was born, she started from Philadelphia yesterday morning, and before leaving secured passage for herself, Mrs. Bergmann, and the nurse, by a steamer which leaves New-York to-day. Her plan was to induce her daughter to accompany her to Barcelona, Spain, where she has a sister. Mrs. Swain arrived at Police Head-quarters at 11 o'clock, and was accosted by President French, who told her of the interview between the Spaniard and her daughter, and, at Mrs. Swain's request, Mrs. Bergmann was sent for. When she came from her lodging in Fourth-avenue, Mrs. Swain tried to reason with her, but the shocks of the discovery of her conduct had obtained for her, and of the loss of her husband, who has begun divorce proceedings on the ground of desertion, Mrs. Swain had no influence over her daughter. She declared that her mind was not made up, and that she certainly should not go to Europe to-day. It was useless to keep her at Police-Headquarters. She would never go there again for fear of rebuke. Mrs. Swain then spoke more firmly and said she had resolved to take energetic measures. If her daughter would obey her she should return home as her guardian in favor of Mr. Price, the Trustee of James Swain's estate, who is a very stern man and unlikely to put up with any nonsense. Mrs. Swain decided on delaying her voyage to Europe one week. If by that time Mrs. Bergmann had not decided to be guided by her friends she will be left to do as she pleases. She was also assured that, as far as the Police Department was concerned, she must cease her visits to Head-quarters and expect neither aid nor countenance. Mrs. Bergmann said that she would make her mind up in a week, and promised her mother that she would dine with her at the hotel and pass the night with her. She apparently did not keep her promise, as at seven she left Police Head-quarters she obtained her lodging, and at 9 P. M. was again a visitor at Matron Webb's.

On Monday night Mrs. Bergmann's maid was alarmed because she had not returned home, and went to look for her. She found her at the Atlantic Garden, in the Bowery, sitting at a table with several men. The waiter came to her with personal men sitting at neighboring tables were sending refreshments to her, and she was delighted at the attention she received. Her nurse quickly took her out of the place and accompanied her to her lodging. Since leaving the Park-Avenue Hotel Mrs. Bergmann has sold much of her wardrobe. A brown silk dress, which cost $75 in Europe, and which was nearly new, she sold to her landlady for $1, simply because she was out of pocket money and wanted that sum. When she left Police Head-quarters on Monday afternoon she had more than $20 in her portmonnaie, and when her nurse took her home from the Atlantic Garden she had only 50 cents. Mrs. Bergmann appears to be in excellent health, and those who see her often say she is not only sane on every subject except the Spaniard, but bright and clever. Mrs. Swain is an Italian by birth.

STEALING A COFFIN.

At 9:30 o'clock last night, officer Lemon, of the Fourteenth Precinct, met in Chatham-street Michael Connors, of No. 75 Cherry-street, who was carrying a child's coffin on his shoulder. He had offered it for sale for 15 cents, and the officer arrested him. It was subsequently learned that Connors had stolen the coffin from a grocery store in Madison-street, of No. 345 Pearl-street, and that it was worth $20.

ST. LOUIS GAS COMPANIES.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 14.—Reports were circulated here this morning that the Laclede Gas Works had been sold to the St. Louis Gas Company. This proved to be unfounded. The fact in the case is that Frederick Cromwell, T. H. Porter, and Mr. Allegre, of New-York, have sold Erastus Wells, John H. Maxwell, and John J. Mitchell, of this city, a controlling interest in the works. The amount paid for this interest has not been made public. The capital stock of the company is $1,000,000.

RAILWAY WORK AND PLANS.

JAY GOULD'S PURCHASE OF IRON MOUNTAIN —THE PROJECTED TOLEDO, CINCINNATI AND ST. LOUIS ROAD.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 14.—Thomas Allen this afternoon accepted Jay Gould's proposition, and will start for New-York to-morrow morning to make a transfer of the stock and definitely adjust all other matters connected with the Iron Mountain Railroad transactions. The stock sold by Mr. Allen is nearly 40,000 shares, and the purchase money amounts to only a trifle less than $2,000,000. H. G. Marquand also disposes of 20,000 shares of the stock, about one-half his interest in the road, to Mr. Gould. Mr. Allen retains his interest in the funded securities of the road; also his land along the line, and will remain President of the road until the next annual meeting of the company, early in March. The gentlemen generally consider the acquisition of the road by Mr. Gould as a good thing for St. Louis, but some of our cotton men are apprehensive that it will result in an advance in the rates on cotton from Texas, to the detriment of this market.

DENISON, Tex., Dec. 14.—The News has the following dispatch from Palestine: "A rumor prevailed in this city to-day to the effect that Jay Gould had purchased the International and Great Northern Railroad. This is denied by Mr. President, R. S. Hayes, who says a contract has been made between the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and the International and Great Northern, under which the former road would connect with the latter at Georgetown, and from thence would use the International and Great Northern Railroad's track to San Antonio, from which point they would conjointly construct a road to Laredo.

BOSTON, Dec. 14.—The syndicate lately formed by Boston and New-York capitalists for the building of the Toledo, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad, which is to be an extension of the Toledo, Delphos and Burlington Road from Kokomo to St. Louis, has met with such success in securing subscriptions that contracts are being let along the entire line of over 300 miles. The officers of the road, having secured favorable arrangements for terminal facilities in St. Louis, state that they expect to have the road in operation by October, 1881.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 14.—The Directors of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company this afternoon declared a quarterly dividend of 1 per cent, payable in January.

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.—In the House of Commons, yesterday, Sir John Macdonald refused to lay before Parliament the papers in connection with the offers made for the construction of the Pacific Railway, saying that the financial weakness of some of the tenderers had compelled them to withdraw their names. The debate on the railway resolutions will commence to-day, an amendment by Mr. Blake, the opposition leader, for a postponement till Jan. 5, having been defeated by a majority of 50.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—Mr. Hickson has declined the invitation of citizens to a public dinner. He gives as his reason for declining the proffered honor that, when he accepted the charge of the Grand Trunk Railway, he laid down a rule which he intends to adhere to, and that rule renders him unable to accept the invitation.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Dec. 14.—At the municipal election here to-day the city voted a subscription of $285,000 in bonds to assist in building the Natchez, Jackson and Columbus Railroad. Mayor Griffin, the present incumbent, was re-elected.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 14.—The Directors of the Georgia Railroad to-day declared a semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent.

Work upon the Atlanta has taken $100,000 of the bonds of the Augusta and Knoxville Railroad, which will be pushed forward to completion at once.

TRYING TO REACH OKLAHOMA.

THE COLONISTS FRATERNAL AND DETERMINED—TROOPS GATHERING IN FRONT OF THEM.

CALDWELL, Kan., Dec. 14.—Doctor Wilson this morning started for Washington, hoping to accomplish something to relieve the situation on the border, and, if possible, prevent bloodshed. The settlers broke camp early on Shoofly Creek to move to Caldwell. Before starting, the chaplain offered up a prayer for the success of the undertaking in carrying the Gospel and civilization to this hitherto barbarous and benighted land. The religious sentiment predominates, and, while they are cautious and do not wish to be aggressors, they are determined. One of the leaders said to-day that they were going to Caldwell to get on the recognized road through the Territory, along which cattle men travel to and from Texas, and they will take that road, as they have the right. "We will not," he said, "be stopped along this road unless cattle men and any other travelers are stopped. We have the same right as a man with his thousands of cattle." The settlers seem to be animated by the religious fervor that animated the early settlers of Kansas. Most of the settlers are old gray-haired men, and with them it is no child's play. One of the old men said: "I fought to get into Kansas, and I will have to fight to get out."

The soldiers struck the camp and moved along with the settlers. Major Randall, commanding Fort Reno, arrived just at daylight, and announced that reinforcements were carrying up from the fort. This did not in the least deter the settlers. The colonists are bitter against John D. Miles, the Indian Agent, who, they claim, has 18,000 head of cattle in the Territory, and is inspiring this opposition. Five wagons and 30 men joined the colonists here. The Mayor and a long procession of citizens of Caldwell came out to meet the colonists. They were escorted through the principal streets, ladies waving handkerchiefs and cheering. Judge Lauch, the attorney of the colony, came down from Wichita, and is in consultation with the leaders to-night, and it is hoped there will be no trouble.

WARNED AGAINST SARAH BERNHARDT.

MONTREAL, Dec. 14.—The officiating clergyman of the parish Church of Notre Dame (Roman Catholic) has warned his congregation against patronizing Mlle. Sarah Bernhardt's performances.

REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES

ANNUAL ELECTION OF OFFICERS AND DELEGATES.

HARMONIOUS CONTESTS IN EIGHT DISTRICTS OF THIS CITY—THE OFFICERS CHOSEN FOR THE VARIOUS REPUBLICAN ASSOCIATIONS.

Primary elections were held last evening by the Republican Party in each of the Assembly districts in this City. There were contests in only eight districts, and the elections passed off in a harmonious manner. In the First District an opposition ticket headed by the name of Mr. H. G. Parke was put in the field at the last moment, but was defeated. Mr. Parke claims that his friends were not allowed to vote for his ticket, and he intends to appeal for redress to the Central Committee. Another triangular contest is in the Fourth District, and it will take the Central body to decide which ticket was elected. In the Ninth the opposition ticket only polled 15 votes against the ticket headed by Alderman Jacobus. In the Twelfth the ticket headed by Mr. J. H. Southworth was elected. The primary in the Fourteenth District was held at No. 359 East Twelfth-street. The room was crowded to overflowing, and lines of voters reached far out on to the pavement. The strife was between the friends of Coroner John H. Brady and those of Deputy Sheriff John J. Finckney, of John R. Fellows. Excitement ran high during the evening, and the vote cast from 7 to 10 o'clock, and an hour later the vote was declared as follows: For the Brady ticket, 600 votes; for the Finckney-Nugent ticket, 54 votes. Two of the three inspectors of election were Brady men. The Finckney party say that the vote cannot be taken as a fair test, inasmuch as the Brady men added 100 names of persons who were not Republicans to the roll. The Finckney party had a stenographer present to take down the proceedings, and secured one of the poll-lists containing, as they allege, proofs of fraud, on which they will base an appeal to the Central Committee. In the Fifteenth District there were three tickets in the field—one headed by A. V. Canfield as President, one by Isaac J. Siebind, and the other by W. J. Hollister. There were 260 votes polled, the Canfield ticket receiving 160, the Siebind 70, and the Hollister 30. At the closing of the polls Mr. Siebind announced that he would hereafter withdraw his ties before the Central Committee. Mr. Canfield takes the place of Mr. Sheridan Shook, who has been President of the association for three years. THE FOUR SEASONS.

PASTORAL DAYS. MEMORIES OF THE NEW-ENGLAND YEAR. By W. HASKNOX GIBSON. Illustrated. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

Versatility is not an uncommon thing in persons of talent, but it rarely happens that a man possesses two gifts and has the good sense to cultivate them in common so that they shall aid and supplement each other in winning him a recognized place in the world. Mr. Gibson has not only a decided talent for art, but he is also able to give expression to the fancies that come into his mind by the medium of his pen, so that his graceful poetical prose is nearly of equal value with his fine and delicate drawings. Few artists, if we except those whose youthful precocity places them among the ranks of prodigies, have ever done better work or achieved name and reputation at an earlier age. Mr. Gibson is not yet 30 years old, and although illustration may be regarded as but one of the humbler departments of art, nevertheless the finest order of wood engravings cannot be produced without the exercise of special endowments amounting almost to genius. There is also an individuality about his work which shows it to be the result of fresh and unconventional methods. His mind springs beyond the hackneyed and commonplace, and without outraging the artistic proprieties, stamps even the simplest subjects with a certain originality. The same thing is true of his composition. America scarcely produces a great poet or writer who does not come from New-England, and they never fail to celebrate the charms and attractions of their early home in prose and verse. Mr. Gibson writes in the same strain. He does not, of course, achieve the broad and vigorous portrayals of Whittier, or the tender effects of Longfellow, but his style is full of glowing freshness, and true and deep enthusiasm for the habits and surroundings of his early home.

Mr. Gibson divides his subject, the New-England year, into four parts, each of which might with propriety be called an idyl. He follows the progress of the months from the time when leaf and blade emerge from under the covering of March snows to the days when earth is bound fast in the iron grasp of Winter. We have the dreariness of early Spring days, when rain is succeeded by rain, the whole landscape water-logged, and the ground plastic mud, then the peeping up of early shrubs and flowerets, the carol of enthusiastic birds, the clothing of wood and field with robes of tender green, and the glorious blossoming of the crocus and the dandelion, the dogwood and the hawthorn. Summer marvels and glories are twined upon the thread of a visit made by the author and artist to the rural village of Hanover. We are conducted through the old homestead and its wonderful garret, and we make the acquaintance of the worthies at the village store; we see the farmer at work amid the corn and wheat, and we are introduced to butterflies with gorgeous wings, restless darting needles, and loquacious katydids. With Autumn comes the gathering of crops, and the mellow haze of earth and sky, mingled with the wondrous coloring of leaf and shrub that, from various shades of green, have passed to russet brown and red and gold. Winter brings the glory of the snow, the silvery whiteness of the world, and its soft ephemeral beauty. All this Mr. Gibson describes in fresh and graceful language, and with the fidelity of one who has watched each successive change and found in the handiwork of nature, as she develops one marvel after another, subjects worthy of profound study and enthusiastic admiration.

The special feature of Mr. Gibson's work as an illustrator is fineness and delicacy of execution. This has made him especially successful with such subjects as flowers, insects, and dreamy landscapes and water views. We miss in his delineations of human beings and nature in her wilder moods something of the power and realism that a less imaginative artist might find it no trouble to bestow. He seems rather to desire to entice those to whom his drawings appeal into the fancies of the fancy and to show the subtler and more intricate manifestations of animate and inanimate life. This has probably led him to avoid the animal world in favor of the insect, and to keep to the sunny side of rough and rugged New-England. We would, for instance, challenge the wood engravers of the world to produce more exquisite floral groups and arrangements, or more accurate and suggestive pictures of bird and insect life than are given in profusion throughout this volume. When, however, it comes to rainy days and struggles with fierce Winter storms we see at once where Mr. Gibson's endowments as an artist end. That no one knows better than himself the extent of his powers is shown by his careful avoidance, so far as it has been possible, of subjects of the latter character. His reputation rests, and, as artists are not supposed to be omnipotent even in their own profession, he need desire no better basis, on such engravings as that of the columbine and its blossoms on page 36 of his volume, the butterflies on pages 58 and 59, and the snow scene on page 131. His genius is of the imaginative order, and needs for its inspiration subjects possessed of delicate and tender attributes. These also offer opportunity for that exquisite fineness of execution which is so marked a characteristic of his drawings.

"Packed Days" will undoubtedly have a prominent place among the popular gift books of the approaching holiday season. If any fault could be found with it the criticism would fall upon the title, which certainly has a somewhat dull and ancient sound, suggestive of heavy metres and long disquisitions from the lips of meditative shepherds and other rural bores. Any one who makes the slightest acquaintance with the book, however, cannot fail to be pleased with its inspiring descriptions and fresh and characteristic illustrations, enhanced as they are by the clear and open letter-press and general attraction of all that pertains to the mechanical execution of the volume. There must be a large share among the readers of to-day who will see in Mr. Gibson's transcript of New-England life a picture of the joys and pleasures, the tribulations and the hardships that make up the story of their early youth.

WARNE'S ANNUAL.

—"The pen has done more than the sword to keep alive international animosities; the pen can do more than trade or treaty to heal them." Thus writes Mr. Joseph Hatton, the editor of this Christmas Annual, in prefatory remarks to its readers. To show the sincerity of his belief and help on the healing, Mr. Hatton has divided the authorship of the Annual about equally between England and the United States. It is made up of poems and short stories, and many of the articles are signed by names well known on both sides of the Atlantic. Mr. Hatton himself leads off. In "Stories to Tell," he talks shop unreservedly, and with wanton lavishness throws away three or four excellent plots just to show how stories are made. Fancy a violin-maker spoiling $50 worth of well-seasoned woods in making clear the mysteries of his craft to a casual visitor. The first story, "Within the Spell," is the joint production of Mrs. B. H. Buxton and Mr. W. W. Fenn. It is an average English story of the type we have seen so often in Cornhill, Temple Bar, and Tinsley's. Joseph Cowen, the member for Newcastle, tells the "Story of a Red Shirt," as evidently true in its incidents as the fancy and the fancy in its

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The date printed on the wrapper of each paper denotes the time when the subscription expires.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, higher barometer, stationary or lower temperature, westerly winds, and clearing weather.

Mr. Sadlerut refuses to be reconciled to the presence of Mr. Kellogg in the United States Senate. It is true that the contestant of his seat is dead, but as a successor to the claims of Spofford has been called into being no Democrat who recognizes the necessities of his party can fail to embrace the opportunity to get another vote in the Senate. It will certainly not be the fault of the irreconcilables, North and South, if a few weeks of the present session are not wasted in another fruitless discussion of a question already finally adjudicated.

Mr. Morton, of New-York, has introduced in the House of Representatives a bill to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua. The names of the incorporators are those of substantial men, that of Gen. Grant being at the head of the list. Whatever may be the future proceedings of this corporation, it will be admitted that it makes a creditable showing at its beginning. Nothing is asked of Congress, of course, but that act of incorporation to which the promoters of the enterprise are fairly entitled. When this is granted, and there need be no delay, the company will have secured a right of way across the Isthmus of Nicaragua and a legal existence under the laws of the United States. When the money is subscribed, (and, 10 per cent. of the subscriptions must be paid down,) and the work is actually begun, we may expect a sharp rivalry between the supporters of two great schemes for building a trans-isthmian canal.

Mr. Thomas G. Alvord proposes to Gov. Cornell that he call an extra session of the Legislature, to be held some time after the close of the regular session, for the sole purpose of considering the subject of assessment and taxation, with a view to a complete revision of the laws. Mr. Alvord, who treated the question last Winter with an indifference that was almost contemptuous, has come to realize that the demand for a thorough and radical reform is imperative, and he considers it necessary that all the wisdom and attention of the legislators should be concentrated for a time upon the subject in order to reach the desired result. He would have the Governor announce in his annual Message his intention of calling an extra session for this purpose, in order that an able joint committee may be set to work on the subject and have the benefit of suggestions from the public, while the Legislative body itself may let it alone until the time comes for devoting its entire energies to the work of reform. That a thorough revision of the tax laws is needed admits of no question; that the Legislature is not likely to accomplish this during a regular session we have good reason to believe; and if it can be secured by holding an extra session for the sole purpose, by all means let us have it.

Ex-Judge Howland has been nominated and confirmed as President of the Board of Taxes and Assessments, Mr. Lawson having declined to serve. Judge Howland has had experience in public business, is able, conscientious, and energetic, and may be trusted to do his entire duty both as Tax Commissioner and as member of the Board of Apportionment. He and Mr. Campbell will constitute half of the board, and whatever may be the tendencies of the new Mayor and of the next President of the Board of Aldermen, the public are secure of at least two representatives in the body which controls the expenditure of their money. How thorough that control is the tax-payers do not seem to be fully aware. At least, they have, so far, given no evidence of the fact by taking advantage of the invitation of the board to present their views in regard to the Municipal budget of 1881. There are very few tax-payers indeed who do not believe that their contributions to the City Government are much larger than they need be, but none of them appears to be able to spare the time and trouble to analyze the estimates of the departments and to enter his objection before the only local authority competent to reduce them.

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the Council of Political Reform—and The Times has never failed to point them out—that organization deserves all possible credit for the pertinacity with which it has followed up the subject of Municipal extravagance. The table submitted by the Council to the Senate committee yesterday bears all the evidence of careful preparation, and the figures it contains are sufficiently eloquent to show the necessity of some very radical changes in existing Municipal methods. The suggestions gleaned by the Senate committee as to the possibilities of retrenchment are somewhat meagre. None of the existing office-holders will admit that there is any considerable opening, in their own departments at least, for further reductions, and apart from the public discussion which has been evoked by their sessions, the labors of the committee are not likely to have particularly valuable results. They have, however, emphasized the familiar fact that if we could have every department in the City placed under the charge of a thoroughly able and honest man who should be free to attend to his work without political dictation or other outside influence of a sinister nature, we should have a fair chance of seeing the local Government conducted on economical principles.

It ought to be unnecessary to repeat that under the administration of Controller Kelly the expenses of the City Government have increased, not diminished. But lest the ignorance or deliberate misrepresentation of journals like the Tribune should be accepted by some unthinking persons, let the following brief statement of the facts suffice once and for all. The first budget in which Controller Kelly had a hand was that of 1877. He found it provisionally complete, and he interposed to "reduce" it by cutting off half the appropriation for repaving down-town streets, and by squandering most of that "saving" on Tammany favorites like "Ed" Gale, "Billy" Boyd, and other parasites who feed on the body politic. Apart from the State tax, the appropriations for local purposes in 1876 were $27,731,206; the same appropriations for this year have been $26,096,669. Here is an apparent saving in round numbers of $1,600,000. But from causes entirely beyond the control of Mr. Kelly, the interest charge on the City debt is less by $1,000,000 than in 1876, while, owing to the action of the Legislature, the City pays this year for the redemption of the debt $191,695, against $2,064,813 in 1876. The saving on these two items is $2,900,000, of which $1,800,000 has been added, with or without adequate necessity, to the amounts voted for the support of the various departments. The case against Mr. Kelly does not rest on these figures, but they show, at least, the absurdity of the claim that he has been instrumental in reducing the burdens of New-York tax-payers.

THE REFUNDING BILL.

Mr. Bicknell, the Indiana champion of the right of the House of Representatives to elect the President, came to a realizing sense yesterday that the Republicans would not yield an inch to his astonishing doctrine. He accordingly let his resolutions in regard to the Electoral count drop, with the threat that he would try to renew them when he had an opportunity with any hope of getting them considered. As this hope is a very distant one, Mr. Woodward felt safe in calling up the Refunding bill, on which, by a decided majority, the House went into Committee of the Whole. It is to be noted that the negative vote on this motion was almost exclusively Democratic, with the exception of a corporal's guard of Greenbackers. There were enough Democrats, however, with the nearly solid Republican vote, to take up the bill, and there is very little doubt that, if it be not interfered with to too great an extent by appropriation bills, it will pass before the holiday recess.

The bill, as presented from the Committee of Ways and Means, is practically the same as that of last session, with 3 per cent. substituted for 3½ per cent. as the limit at which the Secretary can sell the new bonds at par. Some details may be changed in the course of the passage of the measure through the House; but it is probable that the substance of it will not be altered. This is very plainly indicated by the announcement of Mr. Curtenden that he will vote for the measure, although he is disinclined to limit the Secretary of the Treasury absolutely to selling the bonds at 3 per cent. and at par. While he would make assurance doubly sure by giving the Secretary a reasonable discretion in the matter, he is confident that the bonds can be disposed of at 3 per cent. He very properly remarks that it is a question of simple business. Shall the Government go on paying 5 per cent. or 6 per cent. indefinitely when it has the right to pay the bonds bearing these rates of interest, and can get money at 3 per cent. with which to do so? The present measure does not authorize the issue of 3 per cents for the full amount of 5s and 6s which become payable, and does not, therefore, as claimed by some of its opponents, tie the hands of the Government from paying that amount until these 5s fall in. On the contrary, it provides for raising a large proportion of the money needed by Treasury notes, which may be redeemed by the surplus revenues from time to time. In this way the capacity of the Government to pay off its debt as it has the means is preserved, while the interest on the part which it cannot conveniently pay is reduced by 40 or 50 per cent. of previous rates.

So far from condemning the bill of the committee for the proportion of the bonds which it proposes to refund in other and long bonds, we regard it as desirable that payments of the funded debt should not be made too rapidly. The Secretary of the Treasury, in his last report, promises us a surplus for each of the next three years not far from $90,000,000, in round numbers. Of this excess of income over expenditures approximately one-half will be required to make the payment on the debt required by the sinking fund, or, roughly, $45,000,000 a year. It seems to us that that payment each year is, in all season and prudence, quite as large as the country should be called on to meet. The other half may very properly be remitted to the tax-payers. The country is rich, and bears enormous burdens with little complaint, with less because its payments are made indirectly. But every economist knows that the taxes must, whether directly or indirectly, come from the earnings of the people. It is not necessary and it is not justifiable to take $90,000,000 a year from these earnings. The credit of the Government can be sustained without any such enormous sacrifice, and the burdens imposed upon the people should be kept down as low as possible.

It is to be hoped that the House will act promptly on the Refunding bill. We see no reason why it should yield to any of the minor appropriation bills. There will be time enough to attend to them after the Refunding bill has gone to the Senate, where, as is the habit of that body, it will get on but slowly. If it is allowed, for any reason, to go over until after the holiday recess, the obstacles in its path will multiply, and the 1st of February, which the Secretary fixes as the date by which the bill should be passed, will arrive before anything is done.

CONTESTS IN THE NEXT CONGRESS.

How many of the so-called elections to the Forty-seventh Congress in Southern districts will be contested by defrauded candidates cannot yet be stated, but preparations are on foot in quite a number of cases. There are others in which there is no doubt that Republicans would have been chosen if there had been a free election, a full ballot, and a fair count, but the influences which defeated them may not be such as can be dealt with as direct frauds upon the ballot-box. Votes which were never cast and which there was no attempt to cast, on account of intimidation and discouragement, must, of couse, be left out of account, but where men were driven away from the polls or prevented from casting their ballots by violence and trickery, where legal votes were received and then thrown out for no proper cause, where illegal votes were stuffed into the boxes and afterward counted, and where the result was changed by false and fraudulent returns, there ought certainly to be a full examination of the evidence, and, in the language of the President, no benefit should "accrue to any person or party" through a violation of the right of suffrage. It is strange, in view of the variety and extent of the devices resorted to to prevent a fair representation of the Southern people in Congress, that denials of fraud should be persisted in. The statements which are made are so explicit and detailed, and so fortified by facts and figures, as utterly to preclude the supposition that they are inventions, and if they were false it would be an easy matter to refute them. If they could be easily refuted, investigation would be courted instead of deprecated, as is now the case. The fact is that, while they are boldly denied, there is probably a consciousness among the Southern Democrats that the evidence cannot be successfully met.

Among the contests sure to be made are those of the first four districts of Alabama, the Second of South Carolina, the Third of North Carolina, and the Sixth of Mississippi. When they are brought before Congress there will be a great variety of facts to be dealt with, which ought to be fully placed before the people of the country. In the first place, it will be found that the election laws in several of the States have been framed for the purpose of placing obstacles in the way of a free exercise of the suffrage and of giving the officials charged with the conduct of elections complete power over the reception and counting of votes. These officials can facilitate the action of citizens in exercising their rights or they can hinder it. In counting and making up returns they have a wide discretion in the matter of rejecting votes and ample opportunity for falsifying the results. While the State authorities uphold their action there is no means of preventing a consummation of their frauds or of visiting them with the punishment they deserve. These State laws are so admirably adapted for the encouragement and protection of a violation of the principles of free suffrage that there can hardly be a doubt that they were intended to serve this purpose. At all events, they are largely used for that object. Although the election of members of the House of Representatives is properly a matter for national regulation, the existing Federal laws provide only for a supervision of the execution of local statutes. They do not supersede them. That these statutes and the manner in which they are applied work a violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the fifteenth amendment does not admit of question. The effect, and doubtless the intent, is to abridge the right of citizens to vote because of their race. How far Congress can take this into account in deciding contested cases is a matter for consideration at the proper time.

But infamous as many of the State laws are, most of the offenses on which contests will be based are such as cannot be defended behind these enactments. They do not justify a refusal to open polls in precincts where there is a known preponderance of Republican voters; they do not make it lawful to drive citizens away from the ballot-box or to prevent them from casting their votes; they do not provide that fraudulent ballots by the score may be stuffed into the boxes, and that those which have been legally cast may be thrown out without cause; they do not say that Canvassers may manipulate the contents of ballot-boxes at will and make returns that bear no relation to the votes actually deposited. If they give opportunity for such frauds they do not make them lawful. All these and many other offenses are alleged and are likely to be proved, and they will furnish ample ground for excluding from seats in Congress the claimants who seek to benefit by them. It is not probable that these proceedings would have been conducted so recklessly if Southern politicians had anticipated that a Republican Congress would have occasion to inquire into them, and that a Republican Administration would continue to direct the execution of national laws. They counted boldly on the connivance and protection that would be sure to result from a Democratic control of the Government, and they were grievously disappointed in their calculations. Now they resort to denial and a deprecation of Federal interference or inquiry in regard to their misdoings. But the next House of Representatives will have a duty to perform which it is not likely to shirk. Whatever else may be done with regard to Southern election frauds, it is pretty certain that so far as they have resulted in returning members as elected to the Forty-seventh Congress whose right to sit therein is duly contested, they will be thoroughly investigated and will not be permitted to vitiate the just representation of the people.

PARDON BY ACT OF CONGRESS.

The Senate has passed, by a party vote, a bill for the relief of Fitz John Porter. The only Senator not a Republican, who voted against this measure was Mr. David Davis, of Illinois, whose judicial mind, rather than his politics, influenced him in the direction of justice, rather than magnanimity. For, notwithstanding the loose talk about the erroneous findings of the court-martial which convicted Mr. Porter, and the partial conclusion of the Schofield Board of Inquiry, it is noticeable that the main reliance of the friends of Porter was the good-nature of Senators. It could not fairly be urged that he had been the victim of a hostile court, or of an unfortunate combination of circumstances. But it was argued that the war is over, bygones are bygones, ex-rebels are restored, and damaged reputations are patched up without regard to the heats and passions of the war period; and a General who disobeyed the orders of a superior whom he hated and despised ought to be included in the list of persons to whom amnesty and pardon should be extended. If there was anything more than this in the Fitz John Porter case, it was that he was a friend of Gen. McClellan, who, as one of the numerous defeated candidates of the Democratic Party, has also earned a special right to the crown of martyrdom. McClellan is a martyr because he was removed from the command of the Army of the Potomac by President Lincoln, and was subsequently defeated when he ran for the Presidency on the Democratic ticket. Porter was a martyr because, believing that McClellan's removal from command was a virtual abandonment of the prosecution of the war, he refused to obey the orders of Gen. Pope, and supinely lay on his arms while a fight was going on just in front of him.

But this military martyr, although the party of his friend McClellan is now in the ascendency in Congress, has so far reduced his claims for indemnification that we have some difficulty in recognizing in the modest little bill which has just passed the Senate the pretentious relief measure introduced by Senator Randolph last Winter. The arrogant demand originally made by Mr. Fitz John Porter, or preferred for him by his friends, has been so far moderated that we may say that the man who formerly asked for restoration and heavy damages now only pleads for pardon. In the full flush of Democratic success, when the country was ready for almost any extravagant measure of surrender to the old rebel spirit, Porter demanded that he should be put back into the Army from which he had been dishonorably dismissed, and into the place occupied by him when arraigned before the court-martial, and be granted full pay and emoluments, in a lump, from the time of his conviction to the date of his restoration. The bill passed by the Senate yesterday authorizes the President, at his discretion, to appoint Porter to the Army, provided such appointment shall not be to any grade higher than that of Colonel on the retired list, shall be made within eighteen months after the passage of the bill, and shall be confirmed by the Senate. It is further provided that this "rehabilitation" shall carry with it no compensation or allowances for the period during which Porter has been in retirement.

This is plainly a case of getting a pardon from Congress, over the heads of President and court-martial. Fitz John Porter was tried and convicted in 1862-3. The findings of the court were approved by President Lincoln, and he was cashiered. The sentence was generally approved; and if Porter had been shot, as he would, have been in any other country than our own, the popular verdict would have been one of approval, and, instead of his living to besiege a partisan Congress with demands for reinstatement and pecuniary damages, he would to-day be forgotten with the unnamed heroes who fell bravely fighting for their country while he lay on the green sward in Virginia sneering at Gen. Pope and wishing for the return of "Little Mac." Yet, this man has never asked for a pardon. His perfidy has never been acknowledged, and, to this day, there has been no confession that he has done any wrong. The efforts of Porter's friends have been confined to an attempt to get around the court-martial. The dangerous doctrine that a court-martial may be overruled by Congress has been advanced in order that the sentence of a court-martial, in this particular case, may be nullified. The theory of Porter's case is that, while a civil power may not annul the judgment of a civil court, it may annul the judgment of a military court. This is a species of centralization which, under the pretense of subordinating the military to the civil power, puts into the hands of Congress absolute power over the official existence of every officer who is or ever has been in the Army. If Congress can set aside the sentence of a court-martial in Porter's case, it can do the same for the 115 other officers who for various causes were dismissed from the service. These men, in the event of Mr. Porter's ultimate success, will be clamoring at the doors of Congress for a similar Congressional pardon. Congress has not ventured to put Porter back again. It has removed (so far as the Senate's action is operative) the bar of his sentence. If the House shall concur in this, Porter is "rehabilitated," and he is eligible to reappointment in the Army from which he was dishonorably discharged.

EXTINCT CATS.

We can never be too thankful that we did not live in the pliocene or miocene periods. We may think that there are a good many cats at the present day, and that we suffer a good deal from them, but both in quantity and quality the pliocene and miocene cats must have been frightful. Prof. E. D. Cope has recently written a paper on the "Extinct Cats of America," which is enough to make one's flesh creep with horror, while at the same time it fills the heart with gratitude.

Prof. Cope has found the fossil remains of no less than forty-seven distinct species of cats, almost any one of which was larger, fiercer, and louder than any modern cat. The very names of these atrocious animals fill the mind with awe. Fancy the noise that a Hoplophoneus oreodontis must have made when indulging in terms of endearment toward another cat of the same style. How tough and impossible to slay with ordinary boot-jacks must have been the Nimravus gomphodus, and what a dangerous brute to meet with in a dark pliocene coal cellar was the Smilodon fatalis! These were only a few of the forty-seven kinds of cats which made life a burden to unhappy men with whom they were contemporary; and in all probability Prof. Cope will find a large quantity of additional cats before he gets through with his investigations.

These cats are found chiefly in the neighborhood of fossil back fences, a fact which proves that their habits were essentially the same as those of existing cats, although, of course, they were much more offensive, for the reason that the larger any bad habit may be the more objectionable it is. No boot-jacks or beer bottles have, however, been found by Prof. Cope in either pliocene or miocene strata. This does not prove, as the Professor seems to imagine, that boot-jacks and beer bottles did not exist at the periods in question, but it rather indicates that the contemporaneous men and women were so awed by the size and ferocity of the cats that they did not have the heart to throw things at them.

We can readily understand that it is not safe to throw boot-jacks at all sorts of animals. Take, for example, the Nimravus gomphodus. He was "as large," says Prof. Cope, "as the full-grown panther of the large varieties." He wore his upper canine teeth outside of his mouth, which gave him a terribly fierce and bloodthirsty appearance. His "sectorial apparatus"—which he appears to have constantly carried with him—was "especially effective," and he also had "compressed mandibular zami," which must alone have stricken terror into the observer. Now, who would risk irritating such an animal by shying a boot-jack at him? He would probably have jumped from the fence into the back window and clutched his pliocene insulter at a single bound. It is all very well to throw things at the modern degenerate cat, but the man who fooled with pliocene and miocene cats deserved the fate which he undoubtedly experienced.

Another leading cat was the Pogonodon brachyops, and he fully deserved the name. This formidable beast possessed "the biting functions" in a high degree of efficiency. Among his most remarkable peculiarities were "the truncate triangular post-tympanic process"—a process of which he is believed to have been especially fond, and which was indescribably painful when applied to a human victim; "the transverse fronto-maxillary suture," which greatly irritated his naturally bad temper; and his "preorbital impressed depression"—a state of feeling quite in keeping with the sullen and morose humor for which he was noted. It is very clear that when such a cat lifted up his voice in the back yard the only thing for a prudent man to do was to close his shutters and say his prayers. As for attacking a cat accustomed to the infliction of "the truncate triangular post-tympanic process" on his victim, it would have been safer to have attacked a grizzly bear.

The Pogonodon platycopis cat was about the size of the jaguar and twice as wicked. It was, in Prof. Cope's opinion, "a great destroyer of contemporary mammalian life" meaning chickens and such—and it is only too probable that "the largest ungulates of the Truckee fauna were among its victims." We thus see that neither strength nor skill availed against this devouring pogonodon. The ungulates of Truckee were undoubtedly the leading citizens of that locality—men respected for their courage and admired for their strength. If ever the brave ungulates were killed and eaten by the pogonodon, what chance had weaker men or defenseless women and children? It is probable that these extinct cats rendered the other inhabitants of the country extinct at an early date, and afterward died of starvation because there were no more dinners to eat.

Well may we be ashamed of the murmuring and repining in which we have occasionally indulged when the contemporaneous cat has mewed at unseemly hours. Our cats may howl and swear, but they cannot walk into our houses, seize upon the fattest member of the family, and then and there devour him or her, as the case may be. The world has improved since the pliocene period, and there is nothing which more forcibly illustrates this improvement, than the fact that the extinct cats were infinitely worse than are the most depraved of the cats of the present era.

It is evident that the Democratic Congressmen who were so extensively engaged in illegally franking political mail matter during the recent campaign are not nearly so indifferent to the results of exposure as they pretend to be. At all events, they seem recently to have been engaged in a very shrewd, though, as the event proved, an unsuccessful, trick to hide the evidence of their lawbreaking. It will be remembered that much of the unmailable matter in question was detected and held in the Washington Post Office. A few evenings since one of the Post Office wagons belonging to the House of Representatives, and which is under the control of the Democratic Postmaster of that body, was sent to the Washington Post Office, and was being loaded with the matter in question when the city Postmaster discovered the little scheme which was in progress and stopped it. Subsequently he directed that the bags which had been illegally franked should not be removed without his special order. It has recently been discovered that a great mass of matter which could not lawfully be transmitted through the mails under franks was purposely concealed in packages which could be legally franked and so sent out by the Democratic committee. It is expected that these and similar facts will soon be fully made public, and that more than one prominent Democratic Congressman will, as they richly deserve, suffer by the exposure.

That wonderful sail which photography gives to astronomy was recently exemplified by Prof. Henry Draper, who has succeeded in obtaining a picture of the nebula in Orion. Nebulæ do not seem to be thrown at random through the heavens, but are in greater quantity in certain defined districts. They are sparingly scattered over the constellations Aries, Taurus, and Orion. Now it just happens that the nebulæ of Orion have been constant puzzles to astronomers, and the one wonderful nebula which surrounds Theta, the middle star of this constellation, has had more telescopes directed at it than all others. The fact that Prof. Henry Draper has given us the picture of the nebula in Orion and put it down on paper must help us to study the difficult question of nebulæ. At a meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, held Nov. 2, M. Janssen read a paper in which he spoke in the highest terms of the American astronomer. He said: "Dr. Draper has announced in the last number of the Comptes Rendus that he had succeeded in obtaining a photograph of the nebula in Orion, and the eminent author announces that he will shortly send details upon the method employed." M. Janssen then added: "I am not surprised at this result when we take into consideration the well-known skill of Dr. Draper, and also his employment of the newly discovered dry method of photographing, and we ought to receive with extreme favor experiments made in a direction so fertile for the future of science."

There are, perhaps, no public documents of equal length which are prepared with so much care and labor as the President's Message and the report of the Secretary of the Treasury. When they have at last been prepared they are, until the time set for their delivery to Congress, guarded with the most jealous care. Workmen pledged to secrecy are engaged to print them, and in the case of those last submitted a gentleman who enjoys the dual distinction of being a prominent office-holder and a news-gatherer for a great Western constituency was especially engaged by President Hayes to prevent the premature publication of the precious papers. From the fact that all this care is taken in their preparation and transmission to Congress, and when it is remembered that all the newspapers in the country devote column after column to their publication, it is only natural to suppose that they would be eagerly read by all classes of citizens. There is good reason to believe, however, that such is very far from being the case. In fact, it would be difficult to print in the daily journals of the country any matter which would find so few readers as do the report of the Secretary and Message of the President. Even members of Congress go to sleep over them, and men who make politics a business, and who ought to be well informed as to the affairs of the Nation, forever remain ignorant of their contents. The Syracuse Standard, having some premonition of these facts, a day or two since sent out a number of its representatives to make inquiry among the prominent business men and others of that city as to how many of them had read the views and recommendations of the Nation's chief magistrate. The result was significant. The number of persons of whom inquiry was made was 213. Of them only 41 had read the Message, 30 had glanced at it, 23 had read portions of it, 108 hoped to get time to read it some day, and the rest had hardly an idea even of its existence. It is noteworthy that the majority of those who had not read it gave as an excuse that they "could not find time to wade through so much matter." Future Presidents, heads of departments, Governors, and others may profit by the hint.

The ways of the average Southern politician are indeed beyond finding out. Gen. "Joe" Wheeler, the distinguished rebel cavalry officer, who ran for Congress against Mr. Lowe, the present Representative of the mountain district of Alabama, and who, with the latter, will in all probability have to transfer his contest to the next House, is, like most of his associates, nothing if not peculiar. At least, this is the only conclusion which can be reached after reading one of the handbills which he caused to be scattered through the remote sand-hill portions of his district during the recent campaign. One of these circulars, which has just found its way to the North, deserves to be long preserved as a specimen of peculiar political literature. It appeals to the Democracy to vote for Gen. Wheeler on these grounds, the quotation being a literal one: "He is a good Mason, a Knight of Honor. He slept on the same blanket with his soldiers. [How many of them is not stated.] He ate the same food. He wore the same clothing. He always led them in the very front of battle. He was loved and admired by such men as Gens. Lee, Johnston, Bragg, Hood, and Beauregard. He has a great national reputation. Hancock loves him, and thanked him for his work in securing his nomination. Hancock will help Gen. Wheeler to get us good laws which will make the South prosper. With Hancock's aid and the aid of a Democratic Congress, Gen. Wheeler will procure the passage of laws to give us financial relief. He will repeal all laws which oppress our people. He will have laws repealed which tax a farmer on his leaf tobacco or on brandy made from apples and peaches. He will restore the South to prosperity." If Gen. Wheeler could indeed perform all the wonderful things which were promised in his name, it might be a pity that the next Republican House will not find it possible to consider his case upon anything but its merits. Perhaps, however, as he will not have the valuable aid of Gen. Hancock, who loved and thanked him for his service in Cincinnati, he will not care to undertake the task of restoring the South to prosperity by repealing the tax on tobacco and peach and apple brandy.

Operatic singers, notably tenors and prima donne, have, from time immemorial, been so spoiled by the musical public as to abuse its admiring confidence whenever they have had an opportunity. They are generally allowed to do very much as they please. When they decline, from any whim, to sing, their declination is accepted as final, and the disappointed theatre patiently submits, waiting until their fitful mood has changed. The people of Paris do not seem to be so lenient. Signora Giali and Signora Filomena Savio tenor and soprano of the lyric theatre there, having been unfavorably criticised by the newspapers, refused to sing the next evening after they had been announced to appear in "Maria di Rohan." They had, too, some reason on their side, which singers rarely have. They declared that the critics had decided that they could not execute the notes, and that many persons in the audience had denoted their disapproval in a sibilant manner. Self-respect, as well as courtesy, demanded, as they held, that they should not repeat what had appeared to be an offense. The manager, on the other hand, contended that he had paid them to sing, not to show their sensibility. They were still obstinate, whereupon the law was appealed to, and the calcitrant vocalists were arrested and sent to prison. The following morning they yielded, and in the evening sang acceptably to a full house.

AMUSEMENTS.

GENERAL MENTION.

At the opera to-night, Boito's "Mefistofele" will be sung for the last time this season by Mlle. Valleria, Miss Cary, Signor Campanini, and Signor Novara.

Miss Mary Anderson will be seen as Parthenia, in "Ingomar," at the Fifth-avenue Theatre to-morrow night. She will repeat her performance in "Evadne" this evening.

Signor Salvini will repeat, at Booth's Theatre this evening, his magnificent impersonation of Othello. On Friday night he will appear in "Hamlet," and on Saturday in "La Morte Civile."

The last nights of "Matrimony" are announced at the Standard Theatre. Mr. Bartley Campbell's new drama, "My Geraldine"—the first play, it is said, which he has written since the production of "My Partner"—will probably be brought out during the coming week. Mr. Campbell seems to be confident that "My Geraldine" is his best and strongest work.

This evening "The Banker's Daughter" will be revived at the Union-Square Theatre. The play is well known to our readers, for it was produced not long ago with marked success at the same theatre, and was repeated during a long period. The cast to-night will comprise most of the favorite actors who appeared originally in the piece—among others Mr. Thorne, Mr. Ramsay, Miss Jewett, and Miss Harrison, and two actors who appear in it here for the first time—Mr. Owen Fawcett and Mr. Frederic de Belville.

On Saturday evening "Forget Me Not," one of the most successful dramas that have lately been brought out in London, will be produced in this City for the first time, with Miss Rose Coghlan in the character assumed in London with brilliant effect by our celebrated countrywoman, Miss Genevieve Ward. "Forget Me Not" will be placed upon the stage with elegance, and will be performed by the chief members of Mr. Wallack's fine company. "The Gov'nor" will be presented for the last time on Saturday afternoon.

GENERAL NOTES.

Mrs. L. B. Kellogg is the first lady to practice at the Bar in Kansas, she having been admitted last week, after passing a very creditable examination.

A Canadian paper reports that an Irish resident of Pembroke, being about to return to Ireland, sold his wife and family for $100 to a fellow-countryman. Formal articles were signed.

A musical entertainment and a dance were recently given in Austin, Texas, for the purpose of raising funds to erect a monument to Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston in the State cemetery in that city.

The Richmond (Va.) Dispatch expresses the opinion that the Democrats in the House of Representatives have not shown much wisdom in pressing at this session the passage of the Electoral Count bill.

The pupils of one of the public schools in Portland, Oregon, are to celebrate the seventy-third anniversary of the birth of Mr. John G. Whittier, which falls on the 17th inst., by appropriate literary exercises.

The Trustees of the University of Pennsylvania have nominated Dr. William Pepper for Provost of that institution, in place of Dr. Stille, resigned. He is a graduate of the university, and is regarded as admirably fitted for the position.

According to the Port Jervis Union, a little girl in the family of Hiram Buckwood, of Deposit, who lost her voice during a severe illness several years ago, had the measles recently, and since recovering from that disease has regained her speech.

United States Marshal Wilcox, of Colorado, was asked to inform the Attorney-General of the number of special Deputy Marshals employed in the late election, and replied: "People of Colorado too loyal. ¶ No Deputy Marshals employed at elections."

The Yale Courant alleges that a Senior who is dissatisfied with his photographs has been sending them around to his friends with the following remarks written on the back: "Evadne—1. Imagine more expression in the eyes. 2. Imagine smaller nose. 3. Think of my natural vivacity in place of the dullness here. ¶ 4. Imagine mustache."

Santa Fé, New-Mexico, the oldest city in the country, is rejoicing over the recent introduction of gas-light, and, according to a local paper, has consigned to obscurity the troublesome, unsatisfactory, dangerous, and greasy lamps and candles which through three centuries have dimly shone upon the labors of past generations in the ancient city.

Somebody in Cincinnati has published a portion of a grateful letter from Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, drawn out by the recent celebration of his birthday in the schools of that city, in which he says: "I hardly know what to say to my Western friends who have made so much of me, but I feel the honor done me very deeply, and I only wish I were more worthy of it all."

Mr. Henry C. Gibson, of Philadelphia, has offered to build, at an expense of $50,000, a new wing for incurables to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. It will afford accommodations for about 100 patients. Further contributions for the endowment fund are asked for, it being said that the interest on $300,000 will be required to support the entire number of free beds thus provided.

The Washington correspondent of the Richmond (Va.) Dispatch says that if the Republicans in the next Congress attempt to turn out Southern Democrats from negro districts on the ground that they have been elected through ballot-dosing, the Democrats will take the position on the very first case that the proceeding is revolutionary, and will filibuster to the end of the session to prevent it. He claims that this is not merely a rumor, but is the judgment of leading Democratic members of the House.

Speaking of the discussion concerning the Electoral vote of Georgia, the Dayton (Ohio) Journal somewhat captiously says: "The Times does not show the 'irregularity.' It does not appear that the first Wednesday of December, in 1868, came before the first Monday. That makes the difference." On the contrary, it does appear from all the almanacs and records of the year 1868 ever heard of outside the Journal office that the first Wednesday did come before the first Monday in December, 1868. The circumstances then were precisely as now.

The Washington correspondent of the Richmond (Va.) Dispatch said, in his dispatches on Monday night: "The impression has prevailed that the Democrats would be forced to back down in the Electoral count resolution. Speaker Randall, however, said to-day that they would do no such thing. He added: 'All we want is for 147 Democratic members to be present, and then we will put it through. This may not be the case until after recess, but you may set it down,' said he, 'that our party does not intend to play the part of cravens, but means to pass the resolution as it came from the Senate.' He regarded it as preposterous to suppose the Democrats are ready by any act of omission to indorse the heresy of ex-Secretary Robeson, who in his speech the other day took the position that the Vice-President has absolute control over the Electoral vote. Democrats generally begin to show more backbone than they did at the beginning of the session."

The citizens of Sanford, Fla., gave Gen. H. S. Sanford a hearty and enthusiastic welcome upon his return on Wednesday, 8th inst. A few days later a similar cordial greeting was extended to him by the prosperous members of the Swedish colony founded by him in Orange County. In his address to the latter he congratulated them upon the good results of their industry and economy during the past ten years, and felicitated himself upon the success thus attained by the first colony established by him in the county. At Sanford he was welcomed by Mayor French and the Hon. A. M. Thrasher, and in responding referred to the early difficulties he met with in founding the town, his negro workmen having been driven away by his neighbors with shot-guns, and he having been warned by a notice nailed on the church door in the following year, when he replaced them with the Swedes, that his buildings would be burned if he employed foreign laborers. But all this, he said, was past, and now those who would have stayed the march of civilization and prosperity have disappeared, and all, whatever may be their political differences, are working together harmoniously and enthusiastically for the good of the colony.

EX-GOV. SEYMOUR AND THE DEMOCRATS.

The Washington correspondent of the Richmond (Va.) Dispatch, writing under date of Dec. 11, says: "I saw to-day a gentleman from Utica who gave me a good deal of information last session in regard to Mr. Seymour, and I promptly asked him how the distinguished ex-Governor is. He replied that he is well, and came nearer allowing his name to be used at Cincinnati than was generally supposed. Said he: 'When I went home I told him that the Democratic leaders at Washington were generally for him and the people wanted him to run. His

CONTESTING BRIDAL GIFTS

A SHOCKING REVELATION OF FAMILY QUARRELS.

A WIFE LEAVES HER HUSBAND AND SOON DIES OF CONSUMPTION—HER BEQUEATHS THE GIFTS TO HER MOTHER—THE HUSBAND CHARGES UNDUE INFLUENCE—EXTRAORDINARY UNHAPPINESS REVEALED BY THE SUIT.

Master in Chancery Cornelius S. See has just finished, at his office on Montgomery-street, Jersey City, the taking of testimony in one of the most remarkable will cases ever brought to the notice of the New-Jersey courts. The parties to it are Mr. James B. Andrews against Mr. Isaac Cordukes and his wife, Bertha M. Cordukes. Mr. Andrews's parents-in-law. Mr. Andrews's own father is one of the wealthiest linen manufacturers of Belfast, Ireland. He married in opposition to his father's wishes, and has been compelled to make his way in the world without any pecuniary aid from home. He came to this country just after the completion of his education, and went to work for a pittance. He was of an inventive turn of mind, and secured many valuable patents, from which he realized, and still realizes, handsome returns. He is now the Superintendent, at a large salary, of the passenger traffic of the Inman line of steam-ships, holding a position of great responsibility. After his arrival in this country he crossed the water again for his bride, and when he returned went to live in a handsome house in a small aristocratic street known as Wiley-place, adjoining Sipp-avenue, on Jersey Heights. Next door to him lived the Cordukeses. Mr. Cordukes is a broker in Wall-street, and, besides being a man of wealth himself, is connected with an English family of large possessions. The intercourse between the two families was not frequent. Mrs. Andrews's health failed rapidly from consumption, and Mrs. Cordukes did not visit her much for the reason that she did not care to burden the invalid with her entertainment. The wife ultimately died, leaving a son, Edwin, now 7 years old.

The need of some one to look after his household affairs induced Mr. Andrews to think of a second marriage. He says the servants stole from him systematically, and his son was neglected. He was a regular attendant at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, on the Heights, and was for some time one of its Vestrymen, but within the last three years he resigned that position. The Rev. Mr. Putnam intimated in his testimony in the bending will case that the resignation was demanded because of Mr. Andrews's too convivial habit. Mr. Andrews says, on the other hand, that his pressing business engagements would not permit him to remain longer in the position. In consequence of his resignation he left the family of James Dunn, Mr. Dunn being a very zealous member of the congregation, and, like Mr. Cordukes, a broker. The acquaintance between himself and the Cordukes family, who also attended the church, ripened into an intimacy. Mr. Andrews's liking for the families became all the better because in each there was a young lady. He asked Mr. Dunn for permission to visit his daughter and Mr. Dunn consented to allow him to do so on the condition that he did not make known to her, till further consultation with him, the possible result of his addresses. He was rather turned away from Miss Lillie Dunn when she assured him one evening that her father was obliged to spend $100 a year for her gloves, "not kid gloves." Meanwhile he had been visiting Miss Jennie Cordukes, and finally he wrote Mr. Dunn a letter in which he said he did not believe Miss Dunn would listen to his proposal of marriage if he made one. His attentions to Miss Cordukes had become more marked. She reciprocated his affections. One night, Mr. Andrews says in his testimony before Master in Chancery See, he was aroused from his sleep by the striking of pebble-stones against his window. On going to the window he found Miss Jennie's father, who said: "Jennie says that she will die before morning if you do not come and see her at once." Mr. Andrews dressed himself, and going into Mr. Cordukes's house sat up with the daughter all night.

On June 1, 1876, Andrews and Miss Jennie were married by the Rev. Mr. Putnam. As wedding gifts, her grandmother in England sent a check for $500; an uncle in England another check for $500; Mr. Cordukes gave them a check for $500, and their mutual friend and Mr. Cordukes's father, who said: "Jennie says that she will die before morning if you do not come and see her at once." Mr. Andrews dressed himself, and going into Mr. Cordukes's house sat up with the daughter all night.

PLANS TO OBTAIN BAD COIN

DESCRIBING SECRET SERVICE METHODS RECENTLY USED.

PURCHASER MADE FROM COUNTERFEITERS NOW IN JAIL—TELLING OFFICERS HOW AND WHERE TO GET "THE QUEEN."

The manner in which the Secret Service obtained possession of counterfeit standard and trade dollars held by some of the counterfeiters arrested on Friday last was described by Detective Marion D. Van Horn yesterday, at the examination before Commissioner Shield, in the case of William Runyon, one of the men now in Ludlow-Street Jail. Van Horn, who is one of the subordinates of Officer Perkins, of Pittsburg, came here on Sept. 27 with a letter of introduction from Eli Fields, of Bradford, Penn., to Edward F. Barrows. The latter introduced him to the man Runyon that night in the saloon at No. 120 Second-street, where Runyon was employed as bar-tender. A specimen counterfeit standard dollar was then submitted by the two men to Van Horn for examination, and on the evening of Sept. 29 he again met Barrows and Runyon in a private room attached to the saloon. In obedience to a whispered order from Barrows, Runyon exhibited two packages of the spurious coins wrapped in brown paper, remarking at the same time, that he and "Ed" (meaning Barrows) were making only 15 per cent. out of the transaction. Van Horn handed him four five-dollar bills, and received $2 50 in change, $17 50 being the price charged for the counterfeit coins. When the detective subsequently examined the coins he found only 6 counterfeits of the standard dollar and one trade dollar, although he had bargained for 50 of the former.

Mr. Robert M. Waite, who appeared for Runyon, asked Van Horn whether he was a Mason, and the witness answered in the affirmative. "Did you not go to those men and, under the pretense of being a Mason, endeavor to induce them to confide in you and seduce them into the commission of a crime?" was the lawyer's next question. "No, Sir," replied the detective; "Masonry was not mentioned among us until after the transaction." He conversed with Runyon on several occasions after Sept. 29, and was informed by the latter that "the boys were terribly scared" in consequence of a report that the Secret Service intended to make a "scoop" in, and that James A. Morrison, one of the gang, having had "a twist put on him in Pennsylvania, in connection with a counterfeit one-hundred-dollar note, was trying to "square himself with the Government." Runyon also intimated to the witness that counterfeit two-dollar bills and five-dollar bills would soon be issued. Van Horn added that the substance of his conversations with Runyon was entered by him in a diary and given in his daily reports to Mr. Perkins. A further hearing of the case will take place to-morrow, at 11 A. M. Russell and Balmard will be examined today.

Joseph Seinoth, alias Parker, and Andrew Yates, two of the gang of counterfeiters, were brought up for examination, before United States Commissioner Allen, in Brooklyn, yesterday. Seinoth, through his counsel, waived an examination, and was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. Yates, who stabbed Secret Service Officer Foster while that officer, with the assistance of another, was trying to force the prisoner into a photographer's chair in order that his picture might be taken for the Rogues' Gallery, demanded an examination. Marion D. Van Horn was the first witness called. He had been introduced to Yates on the 30th of September. Yates had talked freely of counterfeit money, and expressed a desire to obtain some new counterfeit five-dollar notes which he had heard were in circulation. He had given witness a counterfeit trade dollar, and had told him he could get any quantity of the same kind for 50 cents on the dollar. Yates also offered to furnish him with a counterfeit five-dollar note which could be bought for $9 75. At another time Yates told him he thought he could get counterfeit fifty-dollar and one-hundred-dollar bills. The trade dollar received by witness from Yates was placed in evidence. During October the witness met Yates by appointment on several occasions, and was introduced by him to a man named Russell. Mr. Perkins was introduced to Yates by the witness as a "shover of the queer."

Yates had told witness he thought of manufacturing trade dollars at his shop, and exhibited the material, but was deterred by fear of the landlord, who was "constantly poking around." The prisoner, who ostensibly carried on the business of a lock and gun smith, had admitted to the witness that he had "helped the boys" by making keys for them. The "boys" referred to were understood to be thieves, who desired to be provided with skeleton keys and other tools used in effecting entrance into houses. The witness purchased counterfeit trade dollars from the man Russell, and Yates said he was interested in the purchase, and that he had received a commission on the sale. On cross-examination the witness said he was introduced to Yates by James Morrison, a horse dealer of Rensselaer County, and that he was introduced to Morrison by Ira G. Hatch, a Pennsylvania oil-refiner. The names of these men were at first withheld, but were subsequently given by the witness with the consent of the District Attorney. Van Horn further testified that he held out to Yates the idea that he was in the business of passing counterfeit money. G. R. Perkins, of Pittsburg, then called and gave similar testimony in relation to meeting Yates and talking with him about counterfeit money. Counsel for Yates then moved for a discharge of his client on the specific offense of passing a counterfeit coin as a good one on the ground that there was no evidence of intent. The court declined to pass upon that particular question, and fixed the bail of both prisoners at $5,000, in default of which they were taken to Raymond-Street Jail.

REINHARDT AGAIN SENTENCED.

TO BE HANGED ON JAN. 14 FOR THE SILVER LAKE MURDER.

Edward Reinhardt, convicted in Richmond County of the murder of Mary Degnan about two years ago, was brought before the General Term of the Supreme Court yesterday, in Brooklyn, and sentenced to be hanged on the 14th of January. He was sentenced some time ago, but a stay was procured, and pending a decision, the day set for the execution went by. The prisoner, who is a young man about 25 years of age, and rather good-looking, was brought from Staten Island in charge of Sheriff O'Connor, of Richmond County. He appeared very nervous while in court, but, when his name was called, stood up, and answered in a clear, steady voice. When asked if he had anything to say his counsel insisted that the General Term had no power to name a day on which to carry out the sentence. He held that the statute provides that the appellate court—the General Term on review of the writ of error and the Court of Appeals reaffirming the judgment—has the power, when the writ of error appears legal, to remit the record to the court in which such conviction was had to pass the sentence there. No conviction was had in this court or the Supreme Court at all, but in the Court of Oyer and Terminer. After advisement and reflection, counsel was constrained to argue and insist that this court has no jurisdiction to designate a day for the carrying out of the sentence, as the power lies in the Court of Oyer and Terminer alone.

To this argument the Presiding Justice replied: "By reason of your appeal, we considered this the proper court, and your objection is overruled. Mr. Reinhardt, as the day fixed for the execution of your sentence has passed by reason of your appeal, and the judgment remains in this court, and devolves by statute on the Supreme Court, we name the 14th day of January next as the day on which the sentence of the court shall be carried out." The prisoner, who appeared to gasp for breath when his sentence was pronounced, was quickly removed from court by the Sheriff and taken back to Staten Island. Reinhardt, after murdering the girl Degnan, cut her body into pieces, which he placed in a barrel and buried near Silver Lake.

AN IMPOVERISHED BARON'S ESTATE.

Annie de Reiffenberg and Israel Minor, Jr., were granted letters of administration yesterday on the estate of the late Baron Herman F. C. de Reiffenberg, who died here last September. The estate consists of personal property, said to be worth $2,400. Baron de Reiffenberg was a native of Belgium, and, having quarreled with his family, came to this City 18 years ago. After making a tour of the country, and spending considerable time at fashionable resorts, he returned to this City and married a pretty Irish girl named Annie Sweeney, assuming the name of De Laurie. The Baron and his Irish wife becoming impoverished, lived for some time in the tenement-house at No. 36 Mulberry-street. On June 11 last he disappeared from his home, and his wife on searching the Police records ascertained that he had been convicted of petit larceny and sent to the penitentiary for one year. He died in the penitentiary hospital on Sept. 8.

MR. WALES ACCEPTS OFFICE.

The Hon. Salem H. Wales, whose nomination and confirmation for the office of Commissioner of Parks on Friday was received with pleasure by the best classes of citizens, called at Mayor Cooper's office yesterday and announced that, after a careful consideration of the matter, he had decided to accept the position. Mayor Cooper expressed his gratification that Mr. Wales had concluded to give his valuable experience to the work of looking after the parks, and then, without ceremony, Mr. Wales took the usual oath of office, which was administered to him by the Mayor.

THEOPHILUS YOUNGS SAFE FROM HARM.

It was reported yesterday that Theophilus Youngs, about whose disappearance five years ago, sudden reappearance last summer, and the litigation instituted by his wife, who refuses to recognize him as her own Theophilus, so much has been recently published, had again disappeared and was not to be found. Theophilus has been in the hands of his brother Henry and of Henry's lawyers, Messrs. Drake & Bruce, and his residence has been kept a profound secret, because, it was said, among other reasons, of his great fear of his wife. Mrs. Youngs is a stout woman, with a brawny arm, and Theophilus is slight and far from muscular. It was stated at Drake & Bruce's office that there was no truth in the rumor. At an early date the surrogate will be asked, in view of the testimony fixing the identity of Theophilus, to revoke the letters of administration upon his estate granted to the wife.

BREAKING HER SHAFT AT SEA.

HOW THE REPUBLIC GOT IN AT LAST—ARRIVAL OF OTHER STORM-TOSSED SHIPS.

The steam-ship Republic, of the White Star Line, which was passed with her machinery disabled on Friday last, was towed into port yesterday morning, by the steam-ship Circassia, of the Anchor Line, which sailed from here on Saturday last. Capt. Irving, of the Republic, reports that he sailed from Liverpool on Nov. 30, and called at Queenstown on the following day. The weather was favorable until Saturday the 6th, when a strong gale set in from south and veered to west. It blew heavily on the following day, and on the 8th the wind was variable, with a strong head-sea. At 3 P. M. last Wednesday, while the weather was favorable, the vessel shook somewhat, as though some of her machinery had given out, and on examination it was found that her propeller shaft had been broken. The Republic lay to while a boat was lowered in order to see if the steamer had been otherwise damaged, but she was found to be all right on the outside. All hands were called, and in 30 minutes sail was set, and the Republic was under way again, dragging her propeller through the water after her. The accident occurred in latitude 49° 35' and longitude 59° 50', and the vessel had now some 700 miles to make under sail. Very little excitement was caused by the breaking of the shaft, and the passengers, of whom there were 65 in the cabin and 175 in the steerage, all behaved well. By noon on Thursday the Republic had made 71 miles under sail, and during the succeeding 24 hours she made 78 miles. At sunset on Friday, in latitude 41° 25' and longitude 69° 40', the Mosel, of the North German Lloyd, was spoken, and Capt. Irving asked to be towed into port. Capt. Neynaber, of the Mosel, refused, saying he was short of coal. During the night a heavy gale blew from the north-east and the vessel's sails were kept full. Snow-squalls followed one another, and the ship was driven along rapidly. The heavy breeze on the starboard quarter proved a great help, and at noon on Saturday the log showed that during the past 24 hours 176 miles had been made. This is regarded as very good speed for a steam-ship under sail. The huge propeller made a dismal sound as it dragged in the water. The weather was rather foggy on Saturday morning, but this caused no delay. Four steamers had been passed in addition to the Mosel, but none of them appeared to be in a condition to take the Republic in tow. At noon on Sunday the day's work had been over 100 miles. During the afternoon, when Sandy Hook was distant about 240 miles, the Circassia was sighted bound East. She answered the Republic's signals, and her master consented to put about and tow the disabled vessel into port. After the latter had been taken in tow the weather was fair, but the progress, of course, was not rapid. The Republic was towed up to her pier near the foot of West Tenth-street by tug-boats, while the Circassia came to anchor in the North River off Pier No. 22. A fresh supply of coal was taken in by the latter, and some stores were sent aboard, after which she weighed her anchor and steamed out to sea, having been delayed a little over three days. The amount of salvage to be awarded to the Anchor steam-ship had not been decided upon yesterday. The White Star vessel will probably be kept in port some time in order to make the necessary repairs.

The steam-ship Devonia, of the Anchor Line, which arrived from Glasgow yesterday, met with strong westerly gales and high seas until the Banks of Newfoundland were passed. Since then the weather has been favorable. The Gallia, of the Cunard Line, left Liverpool in company with the Arizona, of the Guion Line, which arrived here on Monday, and reached Sandy Hook yesterday. She met with considerable heavy weather, but made a good passage notwithstanding. The steam-ship Italia, which arrived at Quarantine from the Mediterranean yesterday, also met with severe weather at times. During the past nine days the brig Morning Light, which reached port from Demerara yesterday, has been to the northward of Hatteras, beating her way against head gales and seas. Capt. Nickerson, of the bark Nereid, which arrived from Singapore yesterday, reports that in latitude 38° north and longitude 70° 30' west he passed a derelict vessel, the decks of which were nearly even with the water, while the spars had been carried away.

A NEW TAX COMMISSIONER.

MR. LAWSON DECLINES OFFICE—EX-JUDGE HOWLAND OBTAINS THE PLACE.

At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen yesterday a communication was received from Mayor Cooper announcing that Mr. John D. Lawson had declined to serve as President of the Tax Commissioners, and nominating for that office ex-Judge Henry E. Howland. The nomination was received almost in perfect silence, although the chamber was crowded with both Tammany and Anti-Tammany politicians. Alderman Feeley at once moved that Judge Howland be confirmed.

"I move as an amendment," exclaimed Alderman Kirk, "that the nomination be referred to the Committee on County Affairs."

The amendment was lost by a vote of 15 to 6, and then the roll was called on the motion to confirm. President Morris made a short speech in support of the nominee, who was confirmed by the following vote:

Affirmative—Messrs. Cogley, Black, Foster, Goodwin, Haften, Hall, Holbig, Jacobus, Kenney, Marshall, McCarey, Pentz, Sutch, Wade—14.

Negative—Messrs. Haughton, Keenan, Kirk, Murphy, Sauer, Slevin—6.

Alderman Shells was absent when the vote was taken.

Judge Henry E. Howland is one of the best-known and most highly esteemed Republicans in this City. He is about 50 years of age, a lawyer by profession, and a member of the firm of Anderson, Howland & Youngs. He was appointed by Gen. Dix to fill the unexpired term of Judge Spalding as Judge of the Marine Court, and he filled the place with such ability as to win for him the universal commendation of the Bar. In the Fall of 1875 he was elected Alderman in the Seventh District, and served through 1876, making a thoroughly creditable record. When Henry Smith died, Mayor Havemeyer nominated Mr. Howland to be his successor as Police Commissioner, but the Board of Aldermen refused to confirm him. Mr. Howland did not know that his name was to be presented to the board yesterday for the place to which he has been nominated, and expressed great astonishment when informed that his name had been sent in and that the nomination was immediately approved.

RAZING PARTS OF FULTON MARKET.

After deciding that it was unnecessary to pull down the Fulton Market building because there was a probability that if it were raised business would not return to it when it was rebuilt, Judge Van Brunt, in Common Pleas Chambers, appointed a commission of architects, consisting of David Jardine and Lucius Scudder, to inspect the building and determine which portions should be torn down as incapable of being repaired. This commission made the inspection on Dec. 10, in company with Inspector Estabrook, of the Bureau of Buildings, of the Fire Department, and their report was presented to Judge Van Brunt yesterday. They say a portion of the building which overhangs the Fulton-street sidewalk for 100 feet westward from the north-west corner of South and Fulton streets is dangerous to life because likely to be broken down by a heavy fall of snow, or torn away by a high wind. They also condemn that portion at the corner of Front and Beekman streets. Judge Van Brunt made an order directing the Fire Commissioners to have the insecure portions of the building torn down immediately.

TWO WILLIAM FANNINGS.

Two prisoners, both named William Fanning, were disposed of in the General Sessions Court yesterday. In Recorder Smyth's court the one who lived at No. 503 Greenwich-street was arraigned for highway robbery. On the night of the 1st inst., in company with two other men, this Fanning attacked Andrew McGann, of Hoboken, as he was walking through West-street, and after knocking him down and kicking him robbed him of his watch-chain. Fanning was subsequently arrested by Officer Lally, of the Ninth Precinct, but the other thieves escaped. In court yesterday he pleaded guilty to larceny from the person, and having served a term in State Prison, was sentenced by Recorder Smyth to the full term—five years' imprisonment. The other William Fanning was an errand boy of 16, living at No. 236 Seventh-avenue. He was accused before Judge Cowing of having stolen $37 from a bureau drawer in the residence of Officer John G. Minta, of the Twenty-second Precinct, at No. 219 West Fifty-third-street, and pleaded guilty. Being his first offense Judge Cowing sent him to the Elmira Reformatory.

STEALING WHEN HE GOT ASHORE.

John Blandey, one of the hands attached to the pilot-boat Francis Perkins, (No. 18) obtained permission from the Captain to come up to this City to spend Thanksgiving. He failed to return. On Thanksgiving night the clothing factory of Edward Weinberger, No. 84 Clinton-street, was broken into and robbed of 19 overcoats valued at $260. The officers of the Thirteenth Precinct subsequently arrested Blandey, in company with a youth named Samuel Isaacs, and in his possession found a portion of the stolen property. When the case was called by Assistant District Attorney Phelps, in General Sessions, yesterday, Isaacs was discharged, it having been shown that he was not implicated in the theft. Blandey pleaded guilty, and admitted to Recorder Smyth that he had served a term in the penitentiary. He was sentenced to two years in State prison.

REDUCING EMIGRANT TICKETS.

The New-York Central and New-York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad Companies yesterday sold emigrant tickets in Castle Garden at a reduction of 25 per cent., to meet the cut made by the Pennsylvania Company. No official announcement of this was made. However, Passenger Agent Abbott, of the Erie, and Emigrant Passenger Agent Deane, of the Central Company, spent the greater part of the day in the Garden discussing the situation with individual Commissioners. The latter agreed to come to some understanding with the railroads, and, in accordance with a resolution of the board of commissioners, bill, and appointed William H. Beard, of the Tenth Ward, and Dr. Deane, of the Sixteenth Ward, to fill two vacancies in the Board of Education. Mr. Beard's office is in Pearl-street, and the health-fire politicians are much exercised as to who shall be appointed Clerk in his court.

IT IS ALTOGETHER WRONG to trifle with a Bad Cough or Cold, when the risk is so great and a remedy so sure, prompt, and thorough as Dr. JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT can be readily found.—Advertisement.
